HARRY TRUMAN

ORDERED BEFORE COMMITTEE

Truman, Byrnes Get Subpoenas

WASHINGTON (AP)—A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee said today it has issued a subpoena for the appearance of former president Truman Thursday for questioning in the Harry Dexter White case.

The committee member, a Democrat who did not wish to be identified, said he did not know whether the subpoena had yet been served on Truman who is in New York.

He said a subpoena for the same day also has been issued for former state secretary James F. Byrnes.

Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, has supported the charge of Attorney General Herbert Brownell that Truman promoted White, one-time assistant treasury secretary, although the president was aware of FBI reports that White was a Soviet spy.

Mr. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Truman's former military aide, already is under subpoena for Thursday, both by the un-American activities committee and the Senate internal security subcommittee.

The Senate group announced this morning that it intends to ask Byrnes "for his recollections" of the matter.

Byrnes said in a statement Monday night that he recalled the Federal Bureau of Investigation document and talked with Truman about it early in 1946—the time when White was being promoted.

QUESTION SECRETARY
The Senate committee said that in addition to Vaughan it would question Secretary of State George C. Marshall's former secretary, Miss Ruth Anderson, on Thursday.

Truman has no immunity to subpoena from a congressional committee by reason of the fact he is an ex-president. However, it could be a fine legal point whether some questions about his official actions would infringe upon constitutional division of the executive and legislative branches of the government.

Byrnes and Truman have become bitter political foes in recent years, and the South Carolina governor supported President Eisenhower in the 1952 campaign.

Boxer Dies on Gallows, Buried in Pauper's Grave
VANCOUVER (CP)—Charles Matthews, young boxer who fought under the name of Sonny Jones and killed to the rhythm of a jazz beat, was hanged at four minutes past midnight today in Oakalla Prison Farm.

Matthews, 21, was executed for the hammer-slaying last March of his manager's sister, Mrs. Los Angeles Smith, whom he accused of breaking up his romance with a young girl, Peggy Bowen.

At the same time, a 23-year-old woman who lived with the Smiths, Mrs. Jocelyn Wallberg, was severely beaten while Matthews played the record "Charlie Was a Boxer," on the phonograph.

Twelve minutes after the trap was sprung, the New York Negro was pronounced dead. His body was taken to a pauper's grave. There were no mourners. His body was not claimed.

Coward Admits Big Sweepstake Operation Here

Pleads Guilty As Charged

A key man here in what is purported to be one of the biggest sweepstake rings in Canada pleaded guilty in city police court today to a charge of unlawfully conducting a lottery.

He is George Herbert Coward, 50, of 929 North Park.

He was apprehended by two Saanich police officers at 3 a.m. Monday while driving a car along Quadra near Tattersall.

In the rear compartment of the car they found a large amount of sweepstake material and more after raiding his North Park Street home.

Coward originally appeared before Magistrate H. C. Hall in Saanich police court Monday morning charged with the same offense.

CITY JURISDICTION

At a special session of the Saanich court today, however, the charge with withdrawn after Prosecutor Lloyd G. McKenzie had pointed out to the magistrate that the case came under the jurisdiction of the City of Victoria.

A few minutes later Coward admitted his guilt before the same magistrate in city court.

Magistrate Hall remanded him to Thursday to hear circumstances involved. Sentence will follow.

Saanich police intimated that Coward was apparently the local end of a giant Canadian-wide sweepstake syndicate.

While sifting through his possessions police found a list that gave the names and addresses of important men in the syndicate.

However, detectives doubt if they will be able to "catch up" with the others involved.

Coward has been behind bars since he was arrested at 3.30 a.m. Sunday.

ARREST CREDIT

Constable Robin Stewart is credited for the arrest. He was in a prowl car with Constable George Walton and became suspicious of a car proceeding very slowly on Quadra at Tattersall.

Suspecting the presence of liquor, he stopped the vehicle.

On opening the rear trunk, officers found a box crammed with lottery books and other paraphernalia dealing with sweepstakes, including receipts, money and lists of buyers.

At the Coward home they found more sweepstakes material.

"From our perusal of the material, the indication is that the Coward case was part of a large Canadian system dealing with national and international sweepstakes," a Saanich police official said. Books included the Australian and the famous Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake. Some of the tickets dated back to 1945.

Also found in the car were other printed material and cans containing film which the RCMP Criminal Investigation Bureau is investigating.

BELGRADE (Reuters)—Talks aimed at securing peace in the Balkans began here today between the Greek, Turkish and Yugoslav general staffs.

Thimayya Warns He Is Ready To Interview PWs Himself
PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Indian Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya, chairman of the neutral nations repatriation commission, warned the Communists that if they do not agree to his terms as regards the questioning, he may set up the interviews himself.

"I would just allow every body to walk through the explanation tent and put in his application to an Indian officer," Thimayya said.

This would mean that each of the approximately 20,000 anti-Red prisoners could simply state whether he wanted to go home or to remain for good outside China or North Korea.

United States officers are free to question the 22 American prisoners who have refused to go home despite a deadlock which has interrupted the interviewing of anti-Red prisoners by the Communists, it was announced today.

Thimayya made it plain that the deadlock in questioning the anti-Communist prisoners has nothing to do with the interviewing of the Americans who have refused to go home.

But so far the United States command has given no indication that it is ready to try to win back the allegiance of the

Magsaysay Leads Philippine Vote

Least Violent Election in Seven Years Sees Eight People Slain in Riots

MANILA (Wednesday)—(AP)—Challenger Ramon Magsaysay today took an expected early lead in Manila over President Elpidio Quirino in apparently the least violent presidential election in the republic's seven-year history.

Eight persons were reported slain by gunfire and stabbing during the balloting Tuesday. In the last presidential election in 1949 there were 25 reported killed and scores injured.

Election officials said they do not expect decisive results for about three days.

However, Philippines News Service said the trend looks like a "nationwide landslide" for Magsaysay, the ex-guerrilla fighter who quit his job as defense secretary under Quirino last spring.

The early reports showed Magsaysay strength in the central Philippines and the heavily populated cities as expected.

Scattered returns from the north—expected to be a Quirino stronghold—gave Magsaysay the edge, but they were too minor to establish a pattern.

He also held a very early margin in the south, which was considered a toss-up.

After hearing the first reports, Magsaysay said they "seem encouraging" but he added "it's too early... to form any definite opinion."

Big Three

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

PREMIER LANIEL

Churchill, Eisenhower Laniel to Attend Talk

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced today he will meet with President Eisenhower and French Premier Joseph Laniel in Bermuda Dec. 4 to 8.

Churchill issued a statement at No. 10 Downing Street, his official residence.

The Big Three Allied leaders are to review the entire range of international issues in their conference, it was made known.

An authoritative source said Churchill also will make one more effort to convince Mr. Eisenhower that Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov should be invited to a "last chance" Big Four meeting.

Churchill's announcement of his proposed meeting with President Eisenhower and Laniel said: "It has been decided to hold the three-power conference at Bermuda which was planned for the beginning of July but had to be put off (due to Churchill's illness)."

"President Eisenhower and Mr. (John Foster) Dulles will represent the United States, M. Laniel and (French Foreign Minister Georges) Bidault France and Sir Winston Churchill and (British Foreign Secretary Anthony) Eden Britain.

Churchill's announcement of his proposed meeting with President Eisenhower and Laniel said: "It is hoped to meet from Dec. 4 to Dec. 8 and various matters of common concern to the three powers will be discussed."

If Churchill fails to convince President Eisenhower at the Bermuda meeting that there ought to be a top-level Big Four conference, he will drop that project for the present, the authoritative informant said.

Churchill's recent speeches have shown less enthusiasm for such a Big Four talk.

The chief purpose of the Bermuda meeting, it was understood, will be to survey the position of the Western Allies now that Russia has refused to hold talks at the foreign minister level to ease world tension, and apparently gone back to the "hard" policy of the late Joseph Stalin.

The invitation for the new Bermuda meeting was said to have come from Churchill about two weeks ago.

Russia's rejection of the west's invitation for a four power ministers' conference in Lugano speeded the decision for the three-power talks, London and Washington sources said.

Churchill wants to discuss personally with Eisenhower and Laniel what steps the west is to take in the immediate future to resolve the deadlock in east-west relations.

Long Cold War in Prospect
The prime minister will be 79 this month and has announced he is staying in office only to try to fulfill his last great ambition of helping establish a real peace between east and west.

The Soviet refusal to the foreign ministers' meeting on Germany and Austria was a bitter disappointment for Churchill, the source said.

Failure to get the Russians to some sort of conference will mean that the West must settle down to a long cold war in what Churchill calls this "terrible" and "cataclysmic" 20th century, the sources said.

The future of Germany will be high on the agenda of the Bermuda talks, the source said.

Churchill at the Bermuda meeting also may try to persuade Mr. Eisenhower to drop American opposition to the participation of Asian neutrals, such as India, in the Korean peace conference.

The Far East is the area where British and American foreign policy is most at loggerheads.

Churchill Tells Trieste Disputants To Be Cautious

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, soon to meet with President Eisenhower and French Premier Joseph Laniel in a Big Three meeting, has warned both opposing sides in the Trieste dispute to be cautious in the quarrel over the disputed territory.

In a general review of foreign affairs to the Lord Mayor's banquet Monday night, Churchill advised extremists on both the Italian and Yugoslav sides to "keep quiet" and "behave" during the tense situation brought on by the British-American decision to withdraw their troops from the occupied territorial zone.

The decision resulted in troop movements by both Italy and Yugoslavia, and deadly violence last week in the city of Trieste itself, Churchill referred to "mobs, either Fascist or Communist," as behind the trouble.

Generally, the prime minister's speech to the banquet called for "time and patience and goodwill" to ease world tension, although he conceded that the world is in an "awful mud-

Strike Brings U.S. Atomic Plant to Halt
OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP)—All work at a multi-million-dollar atomic-plant construction project was at a standstill here today, halted by a strike of 550 AFL sheet-metal workers.

About 6,000 other AFL workmen refused to cross picket lines thrown up Monday by the sheet-metal workers, who struck Nov. 2 demanding 7-cents-a-mile travel pay to and from work.

The strikers' homes are scattered over a wide area and the spokesman estimated their demands for 7-cents-a-mile travel pay would average about $3.90 a worker daily.

SOBBING MOSSADEGH HITS LAWYER

Screaming Iran Leader Repeats Wild Display at Court-Martial

TEHRAN (AP)—Screaming, sobbing former Premier Mohammad Mossadegh today attempted to walk out of a court-martial trying him for his life after a wild fist-swinging scene climaxed his attempts to disavow his court-appointed lawyer.

The 73-year-old politician, accused of defying the Shah, trying to overthrow the monarchy and illegally dissolving parliament, shouted at his judges: "Give an order to cut off my head, but I must defend myself."

It was the third straight day of emotional fireworks staged by Mossadegh, virtual dictator of Iran before his overthrow last August by Royalist supporters. He told the tribunal Monday he would commit suicide if released and would not appeal if convicted.

He also threatened to boycott future court sessions, asserting that the court is not competent to try him.

Today's outburst came suddenly after an all-out effort by the aged nationalist leader to get rid of Col. Jafar Bozorgmehr, his court-appointed lawyer.

Bawling "Go away, damn you," Mossadegh rose from the bench and swung at Bozorgmehr, hitting him on the arm. Brushing the lawyer aside, Mossadegh, staggered past three dumbfounded court officials and stumbled 20 feet down the aisle before officers caught up with him.

Throughout the melee, Bozorgmehr stood stiffly at attention, but with his head bowed.

After Mossadegh was halted by the officers, he sobbed hysterically, buried his head on his folded arms and screamed: "Say whatever you like. God forgive your dead father."

Bozorgmehr, still standing and his head now erect, told the court: "These two days I have been so insulted by this man and put in such a position I do not know what to do or say. When I was appointed to this job I agreed because I felt my responsibility. But during the last two days he has threatened, tried to besmirch my person, my honor. Under these circumstances the court should not expect me to say anything."

Then he launched into his defense of Mossadegh with a sharp attack on the court's competence to try the politician. He argued Mossadegh should be tried by Iran's Supreme Court, a civilian body, instead of army judges.

He added: "Even before that, the Majlis should rule whether Mossadegh still is Iran's prime minister. Political charges must be tried before a civilian jury."

If th' big three do fin'ly git 't'gether, we kin thank th' BIG ONE, eh, Sir Winston?

But there ain't a TV producer in th' country who don't water at th' mouth when he thinks o' Mossadegh's talent all goin' 't' waste.

Beginnin' t' wonder whether th' provincial finances are run on double entry or double talk.

National Health Plan Not on House Agenda

Bank Act and Criminal Code Revisions
Main Business at Opening Thursday

By NORMAN M. MACLEOD

OTTAWA—Bound only by a simple election pledge to do its best, the St. Laurent government plans to open the new Parliament next Thursday by giving the nation a virtual legislative holiday.

Only necessary legislation, mainly the routine revision of the Bank Act and the Criminal Code, will be submitted.

There will be a deliberate respite from any new welfare legislation involving additional financial burdens for the federal treasury.

This means that national health insurance, although expected to be the subject of a power offensive by the CCF, will not be on the program, nor will it be added, regardless of pressure.

From indications of intentions communicated to its own followers in the Commons, the government has made it clear that its second item of legislation will be the change in the Bank Act designed to enable chartered banks to lend money on mortgages.

As the government explains this measure, it represents the means by which the Canadian construction industry, especially the housing section, is to be preserved against recession next year.

EXPLANATION
The government's explanation of the drafting of the chartered banks into the field of mortgage lending is this:

During the Second World War the life insurance companies, which normally are the main sources of mortgage money, invested in government war bonds to a point which resulted in these assets becoming top-heavy for peacetime operations. Consequently, since VJ Day, they have been liquidating steadily.

During the past eight years, therefore, the life insurance companies have had available for mortgage interest not only their annual premium income, but also the amounts realized by their sales of government bonds. These combined revenues have financed the post-war housing boom.

By now, however, the insurance companies have liquidated their federal bond holdings and as a result have available for mortgage purposes only their annual premium and miscellaneous investment income. This is insufficient to support housing at the pace it has established in recent years.

NEW SOURCE

Thus a new source of money is essential and the government has decided that the chartered banks should provide it.

Chartered banks have not been enthusiastic about tying up their assets in a field where the possibility of them being frozen in an emergency was so real.

Nevertheless, they now understand that the legislation is anti-recession in purpose, and are reported to have become more reconciled to it. The outlook is that it will pass without great opposition.

Ottawa Urged To Hike Vets' Allowances

Legion Presents Brief for 40,000

OTTAWA (CP)—The 250,000-member Canadian Legion today asked the government to raise War Veterans' Allowances for some 40,000 recipients.

In a brief presented to Prime Minister St. Laurent and the cabinet, the legion also proposed a plan for more veterans' housing under the Veterans' Land Act.

The legion recommended that basic rate of War Veterans' Allowance be increased to $60 from $50 a month for a single veteran and to $120 from $90 a month for married persons.

Allowances are paid to 30,000 veterans prematurely aged by war and whose earning abilities have consequently been affected and to 10,000 widows and orphans of such veterans.

The legion also urged that ceilings on total permissible income under WVA be increased to $1,200 per year for a single recipient and $2,000 a year for married persons. The ceilings now are around $850 and $1,200 respectively.

The brief said many WVA recipients "are suffering very real hardship under present basic rates and restrictive ceilings on total permissible incomes."

"Under existing rates, the veteran who must depend entirely on WVA is suffering actual privation in most cases," the brief said at another point.

The legion's suggested housing plan would permit veterans to build their own homes on city lots as well as on small rural holdings as provided now under the Veterans' Land Act.

Initial capital to start home construction would be made available by a revolving fund set up by the government under VLA until Central Mortgage and Housing Corp. was prepared to take over financing of the home.

The plan would make use of the "build your own home" program initiated by the veterans department. Some 6,000 houses have been built by veterans on small holdings under this scheme. The legion urged that the plan be extended to veterans wanting to build homes in the city.

CALGARY (CP)—The city is launching a full-scale investigation into intimidation charges against Calgary officials of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

City council was told Monday night the officials attempted to intimidate residents of a wartime housing project, for which the corporation is the rental agent, to keep them from signing a petition.

Residents of the wartime housing project circulated a petition opposing construction of a $1,400,000 low-rental housing project in northeast Calgary. It is to be built by Gladner Developments Ltd., Calgary, a company whose financing is done mainly through the corporation.

A spokesman for the wartime housing residents told council several names did not appear on the petition because persons seeking to buy their wartime houses from the crown company had been told that if they signed it the CMHC would invoke the rental clause, giving them a month's notice to vacate.

The spokesman, David Walsh, a veteran renting a wartime house, said he himself had asked to be relieved from his job as spokesman because he feared retaliation by the crown corporation.

Ald. E. Bruce Watson said he had received letters from wartime house residents who he said were warned not to sign the petition. He attacked the "audacity of some little official to tell ex-servicemen they had no right to sign petitions."

CRIME COMIC TEST CASE PLANNED

MONTREAL (CP)—Police said today the sale of crime comics in Montreal is scheduled to face a legal test "sometime this week."

The announcement came in the wake of Chief Justice E. A. McPherson's statement in Winnipeg Monday that publishers of comics portraying crimes being committed ought to be jailed. He dismissed a test-case appeal of a Winnipeg businessman against a $5 fine for selling a crime comic.

Under the Canadian Criminal Code, comics comprised of "matter depicting pictorially the commission of crime, real or fictitious," carry a two-year maximum penalty, or a fine.

Calgary Club House Raffle Being Probed

EDMONTON (CP)—The Alberta attorney-general's department today launched an inquiry into reports that 600 ticket stubs were not turned in when a Calgary service club held a raffle Friday for a $20,000 home.

John Hart, departmental solicitor, said the investigation would go into "the whole conduct" of the raffle, sponsored by the Active Club of Calgary. "It appears to be a lottery," he told reporters. "We are going into the whole question and after the department's agent in Calgary has investigated we expect to be able to make a statement."

A Calgary dispatch Sunday said 600 stubs were missing when the names of six finalists, who now must compete in an essay contest, were drawn from a barrel. One report said several boys in the northwest section of Calgary sold the tickets but neither the money nor the stubs were turned in to the club.

It was estimated unofficially that 35,000 tickets were sold in the draw.

The project was sponsored by the service club in conjunction with a trades exhibition and the house incorporates all the latest innovations in the building trades.

Vancouver Shopping Week Up to Voters

Plebiscite To Be Drawn Up by City

VANCOUVER (CP)—Voters in Vancouver may be faced with the choice of five or six-day shopping weeks when they go to the polls next month.

Monday night, aldermen approved a motion calling for the drawing up of suitable wording for such a plebiscite. The wording comes up for formal ratification next Monday.

In the meantime, city council will hear opponents of the six-day shopping week.

The action followed receipt of a telegram from Provincial Secretary Wesley Black, that B.C.'s Social Credit government was prepared to amend present legislation to enable municipalities, after a favorable referendum, "to permit a six-day shopping week, but hours of work will remain subject to collective bargaining."

At present, large merchandising houses are required by law to close on Wednesdays under provisions of the Wednesday Closing Act.

Already scheduled to go before voters on civic election day are plebiscites on sale of the Vancouver International Airport, a $36,000,000 five-year civic development program, a $19,600,000 school program and a $2,750,000 auditorium bylaw.

Cash Stolen From Train

KAPUSKASING, Ont. (CP)—An express shipment of $11,000 in small-denomination bills was stolen Saturday night while on its way from the Bank of Canada in Ottawa to the Kapuskasing branch of the Imperial Bank.

The theft became known publicly Monday night with the arrival of special investigators of the Canadian National Express.

It was learned reliably that the money, in $5 and $10 bills, was missed after the train which brought it from Ottawa pulled out for Hearst, 60 miles to the west. A phone check with Hearst showed the package of money did not reach there.

14 Days' Mourning Decreed for Ibn Saud

BAHREIN, Persian Gulf (AP)—Saudi Arabia's new king, Saud Ibn Abdul Aziz, has decreed 14 days of official mourning for his father, the late King Ibn Saud.

The chiefs have proclaimed their acceptance of Ibn Saud's second son, Faisal, as heir to the throne and prime minister of this land of oil riches.

Ed Farey Swamped With Aid For Small Patients' Party

The ballroom is donated, the printer made no charge for the tickets, the sign painters gave the posters and two orchestras volunteered to play.

Ed Farey, organizer of a dance in aid of the annual Christmas party for youngsters at the district hospitals, says he is dazed at response to his request for help.

He is engaged in a drive to better the $5,500 he collected for Christmas parties last year at the Queen Alexandra Solarium, the Protestant Orphanage and two city hospitals, as well as children of the city's needy.

To that end he wanted to know if he could arrange a dance on a small budget at Victoria Ballroom on November 19. He wanted both modern and old-time music to last from 9 to 1 a.m., with very low admission.

Today it's all lined up. Brother Art Farey pledged his dance band and the Homesteaders promised music for a western style stampede as well, all free.

Every cent from ticket sales (at CKDA, Douglas Hotel) will go into toys and smiles.

The Quality Polish that makes Shoes Last Longer

ANKARA (AP)—The body of Mustafa Kemal Atatürk, who ended the reign of the Ottoman sultans and led Turkey into western ways, was given final burial today, 15 years after his death.

Thousands lined a four-mile route as the body was borne from the small temporary mausoleum near the heart of the city to a great new memorial on the outskirts.

Public Opinion In U.S. Favors Big-Four Talks

Poll Shows
79% 'Yes'

PRINCETON, N.J.—Although President Eisenhower has said that a meeting with Premier Georgi Malenkov would be hopeless without prior evidence of honest purpose on the part of the Russians, the American public continues to be intrigued by the idea of top-level talks with the Soviet leaders.

Nearly eight out of every 10 voters (79 per cent) questioned in the latest survey by the Institute think a meeting of the "Big Four"—Eisenhower, Churchill, Laniel and Malenkov—is worth trying.

On the other hand, one out of every eight voters (12 per cent) thinks such a meeting would be a waste of time.

Interviewers for the institute put the following question to a representative cross-section of voters across the country:

"Would you favor or oppose a meeting between Eisenhower, Churchill, Laniel and Malenkov to try to settle world differences?"

The vote today:

Favor 79%

Oppose 12%

No opinion 9%

Over a period of the last three years, Institute surveys have shown the public increasingly in favor of the idea.

In October, 1950, 58 per cent thought a meeting between President Truman and Marshal Stalin was worth a try.

In December, 1951, 70 per cent voted in favor of the idea of Truman, Churchill and Stalin getting together to discuss world problems.

Following the change of regime in Moscow early this year, an April survey found 78 per cent in favor of a "Big 3" meeting of Eisenhower, Churchill and Malenkov.

Russia's UN delegate, Andrei Vishinsky, said recently in New York that he saw no need for the Soviet government to give any evidence of good faith before a top-level conference was held.

The leading advocate of highest level talks with Moscow has been Britain's Prime Minister Churchill, but last week he cautioned against expecting too much from such a meeting.

WURTELE INVITES RIVAL TO SPEAK

Esquimalt Candidate for Reeve
May Talk From Same Platform

Candidates for the reeveship of Esquimalt are expected to speak from the same platform Dec. 9 in the Esquimalt Road.

Reeve A. C. Wurtele today announced he would invite his opponent, Andrew Whisker, former MLA and official with the department of labor, to outline his policy on this occasion.

"I am inviting all council members to report on their stewardship," the reeve added. "And I want to give Mr. Whisker a chance to state his case publicly."

"I want to speak to the electors myself, tell them of our accomplishments, our economic and our future plans and prospects," Reeve Wurtele said.

As soon as they are announced, candidates for the council will be invited to participate in the meeting, the reeve added.

Esquimalt's election is December 12.

Meanwhile, Mr. Whisker has charged that Esquimalt's council is not administering the $300,000 roads by-law as it undertook to do.

He said information was given the public that reconstruction of roads included in the by-law was to be done by contract. The municipal public works department was to have been left free to repair secondary roads out of current revenue.

"Municipal workers are doing the by-law work, neglecting the secondary roads," he added. He also charged that the municipality has a responsibility to improve Admirals and Colville Roads after accepting a federal grant in lieu of taxes for national defense department property.

ADEQUATE CASH
He stated that growth of the municipality with subsequent increased income through assessments and government grants would provide adequate financing.

Complete reconstruction of Admirals Road within two years could be effected "without increasing taxes," he said.

He listed as early necessities sidewalks for the newly-rebuilt streets, a program to improve "poor roads and open ditches" on Grafton, Foster, Sturdy and Nelson Streets.

He thought that new subdivisions such as Shirley-Forsyth, Bryden Court, McNaughton-Uganda are entitled to "a fair proportion of expenditure of public funds."

TRIBESMEN NOT READY FOR INDEPENDENCE

Canadian Tells of UN Work With Africans

There are no Communists in either Somaliland or Eritrea, Albert W. Reid, United Nations public relations officer, said here today.

Mr. Reid, former Canadian newspaperman, now stationed in Asmara, Eritrea's capital, said all that the Communists could accomplish would be to stir up trouble between tribes—and there is plenty of that already.

"They have enough friction over which tribe should use which water hole, or grazing rights, to keep them happy," he said.

Mr. Reid's main job in the Italian-administered Eritrea is registrar of the UN tribunal, which considers disposal of Italian property there, and other contentious issues.

He arrived in Victoria Friday and will return to Eritrea next month.

Perhaps the major problem, he said, in dealing with the natives in both Somaliland and Eritrea, was that human rights as envisioned by the UN could be explained, but "natives can't interpret them, our way. We have no basis on which we can reach them."

Education was the basis for self-government, Mr. Reid went on, but the problem in Somaliland was that among the tribes there was not even a written language.

Unlike South Africa, there was no conflict between whites and colored persons in either Eritrea or Somaliland. Tribal disputes posed the greatest threat to peace.

Mr. Reid was press director for Austria after the war, working with the U.S. occupation forces. He was in Eritrea in 1951 and since last year has been stationed in Somaliland.

York Players, Now Lancasters, Play Shakespeare in Schools

By DAVID ANDERSON
Victoria High School Reporter

Nearly 800 Victoria High, St. Margaret's, Oak Bay and University School students turned out Monday afternoon for the performance of "Macbeth" in the High School auditorium.

The play, directed by Ian Thorne, was presented by the Lancaster Players, most of the cast formerly at the York, now Totem Theatre.

The cast comprised Ian Dobbie as Ross, Thorne as MacDuff, Doug Haskins as Macbeth, and Monica Dudley, former film star in the J. Arthur Rank organization as Lady Macbeth.

Other members of the cast were Dorothy Davies, June Bohrsen and Pat Atkinson as witches, Walter Marsh as Banquo, John Porter as Duncan, Derek Redfern as Malcolm, and Seyton, David Conway as a servant of Macbeth, Jack Ammon as the drunk porter, Patricia Leith as Lady Macbeth's servant, and Jack Boudry as the doctor.

The Lancaster players, who are on a tour of the province to bring Shakespearean drama to young people of high school age, played at Sooke Monday night and will go to Mount View High School here this afternoon. At Mount View, the company will utilize the new auditorium accommodation which includes an excellent, wide-winged stage and up-to-date dressing rooms.

A capacity audience is assured for next Monday's concert by Victoria Symphony Orchestra with Victoria-born pianist Robin Wood as guest soloist.

Demand for tickets has been particularly brisk and fewer than 100 seats remain at the symphony box office in Eaton's Music Centre.

The concert, to be given at the Royal, will feature Chopin's concerto for piano and orchestra in E minor.

Mr. Wood has only recently returned to Victoria after a series of concert successes in England and the Continent. Born and educated here, he studied music with Stanley Shale until 1946 when he went to London to study at the Royal Academy.

He took many prizes overseas and in 1949 represented Britain in a Chopin festival in Warsaw.

Last Respects Paid Veteran City Nurse

Funeral services were held Monday for one of Victoria's oldest nurses, Miss Emily Constance Stone. She lived in Victoria for 50 of her 90 years.

Recently resident at Stadacona Guest House, Miss Stone died at St. Joseph's Hospital November 3 following a short illness.

Daughter of the late Charles Francis Stone, she was well known to early families here, among whom her nursing career was legend.

She leaves a brother, H. H. Stone, in England and several nieces in England and South Africa.

Cremation followed services at Hayward's Funeral Home. Rev. G. R. Easter officiated.

VC (PC, Esquimalt-Saanich), told students at Royal Oak High School at a Remembrance Day service Monday.

The men who fought in the last two wars did not complete the task set for them in the defense of freedom, he said. The objects were the preservation of integrity and peace.

"The task remains for you young people to continue," he said.

He urged continued, live remembrance and tribute "to the men who spent themselves, and died, in defense of our heritage and the independence of little nations we were pledged to protect."

Participating in the service were Rev. William Buckingham, padre, Saanich Peninsula branch, Canadian Legion; William Jones, poppy fund chairman, and Bill Oldham, president of the student's council, who read "In Flanders Fields."

Comrades—And Sons

THE SOLEMN PROCESSION gets larger. Twenty Remembrance Days up to 1939 saw dwindling ranks at Armistice Day ceremonies paying tribute to 68,000 Canadian dead of the First Great War. The ranks of their comrades and relatives had been lessened by time; the poignancy of war had become a little dimmer too. Today, with a Second Great War adding 40,000 more to the list of Canadian servicemen who paid the price of war, the Remembrance Day ranks have grown large again.

The "war to end war" was the call to the First World War. After four years, appalled by the mounting toll of death and destruction the world hopefully led itself to believe the Treaty of Versailles was a declaration of peace rather than an armistice; except the aged war-tired French Marshal Foch. "This is not a peace. It is an armistice for 20 years," he said.

How tragically right was his sombre prediction!

Twenty years later First World War veterans with lumps in their throats saw their own sons march off, headed for the same battlefields. Beneath the show of enthusiasm their thoughts were sad. Some blamed themselves that they had talked too much of the glamour of war instead of the grim realities. They had perhaps not done all they might to prevent another orgy of killing.

When some of these old veterans bow their heads tomorrow in two minutes' silence they will be thinking not only of their comrades left on the battlefields but also of their sons buried under a white cross in a foreign land, in many cases of an only son whose death has left a lonely aged couple instead of a home brightened by the laughter of grandchildren.

It is fitting to pay tribute on Remembrance Day to those who made the supreme sacrifice.

But they rest. It is fitting too to give a thought to widows, fatherless children and lonely parents who are left as the stark tragedy of war.

It would be fitting also for younger veterans, who take their children to Remembrance Day ceremonies as once their fathers took them, to offer a prayer as they grasp the hands of their young sons: "Please God, not war for every generation."

The Real Issue

IN ITS APPROACHES AND PROPAGANDA, the Social Credit party tries to represent the Victoria by-election as nothing more than a formality, required to provide Premier Bennett with a permanent finance minister. In fact, as Mr. Bennett well knows, the by-election is the first clear test of public opinion on the policies of his Government, especially its policies of increased taxation.

It would be highly convenient for Mr. Bennett if the public thought only of Mr. Gunderson, the individual, and forgot Mr. Gunderson, the finance minister, and his policies. Still more convenient if the voters forgot that Mr. Gunderson is a Social Creditor, absolutely bound, in common honesty, to support all the financial theories of Social Credit both in provincial and federal affairs.

This by-election, indeed, is only one local incident in the plan to capture the Parliament and Government of Canada for Social Credit and all it involves. There can be no doubt about that after the recent Social Credit convention in Vancouver, where Mr. Bennett, embracing Premier Manning and Mr. Low, dedicated himself and his Government to the great purpose of the world's first Social Credit state.

It is said in some quarters that Mr. Gunderson can be trusted by the electors of Victoria because he is really not a Social Creditor at all but only a competent accountant who will administer British Columbia's finances wisely and on orthodox lines. We do not rate Mr. Gunderson so low.

If he is an honest man, as we assume, he cannot occupy such a dishonest position. If he disagrees with the Social Credit theories of his Government and his Party throughout the nation then, of course, he would have resigned as soon as he realized that he was a leading figure in this movement. An honest man like Mr. Gunderson assuredly cannot say to the electors: "Trust me, because I have no faith in my own policies, and do not believe in my own promises and will not carry them out." That version of Mr. Gunderson's position is an indictment of his honor which surely he would be the first to repudiate, which his friends should be the first to resent.

No, Mr. Gunderson runs in Victoria as a Social Creditor and cannot escape one iota of responsibility for all Social Credit policies, provincial and national. He carries in this by-election the whole corpus of Social Credit thinking, the entire cargo of Mr. Low's policies of inflation, prices fixed by government, free national dividends for everybody, a society absolutely controlled by the state. It is on those national policies and on his own provincial policies of increased taxation that Mr. Gunderson is running in Victoria and on nothing else. It is on them that the electors must vote.

Halibut—Story of Achievement

A FEW LINES ON A BACK page recently informed newspaper readers of a new North Pacific and Bering Sea halibut treaty. Canada and the United States, they were told, have altered the previous convention to permit more than one open season during a year.

The news dispatch was modest in length and display. Yet the occasion recalls an event of top historical and economic importance to Canada and this part of the nation.

Historically the halibut treaty is significant because the signing of the original document in 1923 marked the assumption of a new status by Canada. When Ernest Lapointe, then minister of fisheries, was sent to Washington by Prime Minister King to place his signature on the formal papers, this country had acted for the first time as its own international treaty-signing agent. Prior to that, such formalities had been handled by Britain's ambassador to the United States.

Beyond this historic significance, stands a vital economic achievement. Canada and the United States have proved effective partners in halibut conservation. Because of their success more of the species may now be fished in the North Pacific.

Behind that happy condition lies the story of an outstanding servant of British Columbia, the late John P. Babcock. Under his direction the British Columbia fisheries department pioneered the scientific study of halibut. Those studies were advanced by the later international commission he headed. In hazardous undertakings in the stormy North Pacific, field workers scoured sections of the ocean floor to find the eggs of halibut—a needle-in-the-haystack task which was successful.

With the accumulation of more data the scientists were able to determine policies which would have to be followed if halibut were not to be fished to extinction. The fruits of their labors are shown in the recent treaty. The great flatfish has propagated to an extent that some regulations may be relaxed.

The memory of a fine public servant and a record of unusual international co-operation are recalled in the few lines appearing on the back page of recent newspapers.

Canada's UN Contribution

DURING THE 1954-55 FISCAL year, Canada will contribute more per capita to the administration of the United Nations than will the United States, according to an interesting survey conducted by the Canadian Press.

Canada's ratio will be 10 cents per capita against 8½ for the richest country in the world. At the same time, Canada will be meeting only 3.3 per cent of the total UN administration budget, while the United States will pay 33.33 per cent, against the 39.89 per cent it paid in 1946, and Russia, second largest contributor, will increase its original grant from 6.62 per cent to 16.62 per cent next year.

The significant feature of such contributions does not rest entirely on their size, or the amount per person they represent. Rather should it be measured in how much the contributor has left after the assessment has been met.

In that respect Canadians are feeling no great pain from their disbursements. Spread over our population, the allocation of $3,000,000 a year toward running the UN and its agencies is a trifling amount.

That figure, be it noted, does not cover Canada's share towards relief, reconstruction and technical aid, for which funds have yet to be set.

In view of the importance of these departments of the UN work the question before Canadians should not be how little this country can provide and meet its quota, but how much. Surely through reconstruction, relief and technical assistance the less privileged peoples of the world can be given a more stable foundation on which peace can be built. And that is the main purpose of the United Nations.

LOOSE ENDS

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

The Open Mouth

AT THIS moment I am gazing with glazed eyes of childish wonderment at an obscure dispatch from Paris which announces that, in the present season of fashion "women's complexions are to be dead pearl pale, the lips very light pink, and the mouth to be worn slightly open."

The irreverent man, deaf to the voice of authority, may see nothing new or extraordinary in the decree of the slightly open mouth. When, he may ask, have women's mouths ever been closed in silence? But these technical arguments are unworthy of a great and fascinating problem. I mean, of course, the problem of women, and what is greater or more fascinating?

NOW, I speak as a rank outsider, an ignorant man who knows nothing of women and is too old, alas, to learn. Nevertheless, I conducted my own humble survey of Parisian fashions not long ago and was struck dumb with admiration, gawking like any country bumpkin and narrowly escaping death from the traffic on the Champs Elysees.

I observed, to begin with, that the women there already were wearing their mouths open and producing a cascade of sound which almost drowned out the horns of the taxis. They were also wearing their complexions dead pearl pale and their hair in various shades of purple and magenta, streaked like the back of a Canadian skunk with a line of pure white. After that, I can tell you, I came away with a new respect for the French race and for the authority of Parisian fashions which, more powerful than the United Nations or the Russian Government, controls every woman in the world from Paris to Sidney, Vancouver Island.

UNDER THIS enlightened tyranny we have rapidly advanced in Canada. Only three hundred years ago, as I was reading in a history book today, curls and low-necked gowns were actually illegal in Canada and therefore, of course, were widely worn among the fashionable ladies of Quebec (our first town). Bishop Laval thundered against these evils and announced that Canadian women were "the instruments and captives of the flesh."

He might as well have saved his breath. As many foreign travelers observed at that time, Canadian womanhood from the beginning was marked by its beauty, its sprightly dress and its flirtatious habits. It may not have known in that primitive age how to wear its face dead pearl pale, but as-surely its mouth was worn open and has never been closed to this day.

I SAY THIS with respect, for I am a strong believer in fashion, so long as it is confined to women, where it belongs. If anyone doubts that clothes and ornament improve womankind, let him leave the Parisian boulevards where the woman are clothed and visit the Folies Bergere, where they are not. The contrast is depressing. But it proves at a glance that, to look her best, a woman should be dressed.

The economic arguments in favor of women's dress are unanswerable — the economy of North America would collapse overnight if women failed to change their fashions every season or even abandoned the use of cosmetics, just as America would fall into an intolerable silence if they wore their mouths closed.

I AM NOT impressed, however, by these dull business calculations. I am concerned solely with the higher aesthetic fact of women themselves, or rather with the danger that they may sometime decide to be themselves without disguise. That indeed would produce a depression beyond the calculation of the economists. The world would then be too depressing to live in at all. It would be as depressing as the Folies.

In this field of speculation men are always cowardly and hypocritical — cowardly because they do not even venture to wear comfortable clothes like their wives and hypocritical because they always frown on the ornaments of women which they couldn't do without.

LET THE intelligent male reader of these words, if any, consider for a moment what our homes, our streets, our civilization would be like if women could not improve on nature (which, to tell the truth, has done a pretty poor job, on average). Let them face, even for a single day, the spectacle of women unpainted, uncured and unprimed and before nightfall they will cry out for mercy and implore the authorities of Paris to rectify nature's mistakes.

The plain fact is that women, cleverer than nature and braver than men, make the world tolerable both to the eye and to the ear. "Secretly" men envy them and hides his envy under a sneer which should deceive no one.

THEREFORE, when Paris orders for the current season the dead pearl complexion and the pale lips open, when it announces that "brown or chestnut hair will not be tolerated" and that "dark eyebrows are to accompany golden tresses and golden eyebrows dark hair," you will not find me objecting or even scoffing. I know now that these things are all for our own good. I have seen the depressing contrast between the boulevards and the Folies.

The Situation Has Changed

By WALTER LIPPMAN, From Paris

THERE is a misunderstanding between French and American opinion which is still far from being irreparable. However, with sufficient stubborn and reckless stupidity it could be made irreparable. There are catastrophes in both countries who think it will be made irreparable. They see only too clearly what would happen if the logic of the misunderstanding were followed to the bitter end.

The United States, exasperated by the French reluctance to decide how Germany is to rearm, would make a separate military alliance with Germany. Then France, reacting against such external coercion by swinging to the left, would fall into disorders that were too much for its democratic institutions to deal with.

I would not like to give the impression that such a disaster is imminent or is probable. I mention it because it is in everyone's mind. It is in everyone's mind because men think desperately when they despair of getting and of making themselves understood.

Yet there can be no doubt, I submit, that the two countries are involved in a misunderstanding and not in a conflict of national interests. Our national interests are now, as they have always been, complementary.

There is a fundamental community, going back to our own beginnings, which is in fact greater today than it ever was before. It is impossible for the United States to play any effective role in Europe, to have any serious co-operation with Germany or with anyone to the east of the Rhine, except in collaboration with France. If anyone doubts this, let him study the map. Let him try to imagine the Atlantic Community without France and the French Union.

Nor is the present misunderstanding in the domain of morals, manners, and culture. The differences have always existed. Nor does the national misunderstanding stem from an ideological conflict. On the contrary, the ideological conflict in France feeds upon the misunderstanding.

The basic misunderstanding is due, I am convinced, to a different estimate of the international situation. Reduced to its simplest elements, the governing assumption of American policy is still that of 1950 — that Western Europe is threatened by a Soviet military aggression, and that all policies must be directed, must be pinpointed, to the objective of resisting that aggression.

To have any other serious preoccupation is on this assumption blindness, folly, frivolity, escapism to the verge of disloyalty.

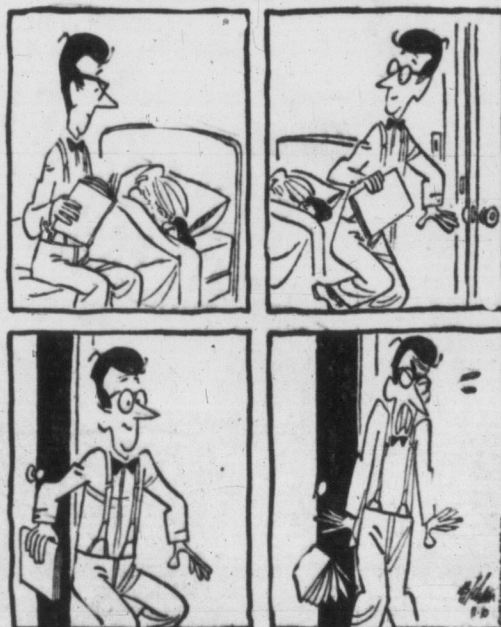

This American working assumption is held and is announced in varying degrees of rigidity and simplicity by the swarms of politicians, admirals, generals and visiting firemen who at home and abroad issue public declarations in the name of the United States.

This assumption is, however, no longer that of any West European government, including the British, or of any important section of opinion in Europe.

There is nothing uniquely French about the French view. It is the European view, namely, that Western Europe is threatened by a Soviet military aggression, the post-World War II social and economic developments inside the Soviet Union, have together produced a situation different from 1950. A military aggression, an overt orthodox organized military invasion is not now a primary preoccupation.

If it is not, then it follows that the big question is how Western Europe is to live at peace and in freedom with Germany, how to achieve and maintain an equilibrium of power within this integrated Europe.

EXCELLENT SERIES

Those who listened to last Tuesday's broadcast of the Canadian Mental Health Series, heard on Tuesday evenings at 8:30 over CJVI, must have enjoyed the stimulating presentation of a phase in child growth. Under the directorship of Dr. J. D. M. Griffin, the current section, "As Children See Us," is to be commended to the attention of all interested in the welfare of young children, and more especially to all parents faced with the grave task of bringing up the small child in this world of today.

Next week's talk deals with the problem, "Fear in the Night," and we take this opportunity to urge parents to listen on Tuesday evenings to this very helpful series.

MORE VIEWS ON MILK

Henry G. Robinson, secretary, V.I. Milk Producers' Association, certainly proves that there is collusion all round when he objects to what Mr. George Masters had to say at the Chamber of Commerce meeting about what the hospital (Jubilee) had to pay for milk delivered by the truckload.

Mr. Robinson has consistently opposed also a better price for cash-and-carry milk to enable those in need to buy a little cheaper from the corner store.

The producers should stick to their end of the business, producing; they have been given a controlled guaranteed price for their product and should be satisfied to let distribution find its proper levels under modern merchandising methods. The difficulty of course now is that while the government is supposed to have given private enterprise a free rein beyond the producer level, at the same time they have denied freedom of choice as to those who do the distributing, thereby creating a monopoly for the present distributors. This fact is hitting Victoria consumers seriously. Milk is now costing us 4c per quart more than it can be purchased in Vancouver.

Mr. and Mrs. Consumer, what do you think about the government action denying you cheaper milk and the giving of a monopoly to certain distributors?

FRANK H. PARTRIDGE,

AGAINST BENNETT'S "BITES"

In the last election Premier W. A. C. Bennett boasted that the Socialists would achieve power in Ottawa in two bites.

The word bite is rather ominous in view of the experience of the taxpayers of B.C. who, in the short time the Socialists have been in office, already have had the bite put upon them, in the form of heavy taxes and taxes shifted to municipalities, but still payable by the same taxpayers.

No, sir! Good executive as Elmer Gunderson is, if we elect him we are endorsing the Social Credit autocracy.

Looking over the other runners, the only one with a chance of defeating Gundy is George Gregory, a young, capable, clean straight-shooter. By electing him, the balance of power will not be affected, but teeth will be added to the Opposition, and Mr. Gregory can be relied upon to bring us closer to that "clean, honest government" so gloriously promised by the Socialists, but not yet apparent.

DONALD H. SEYMOUR,

LIKES ALBERTA FINANCING

If I remember correctly, gross value of output by Consolidated Mining and Smelting in 1951 was $132 million while the gross output of the Alberta oil industry was only $90 million.

There would, of course, have to be some deductions from Cominco's gross, as fertilizer, for example, is not of B.C. origin. But even so, both Cominco and the Alberta oil industry are exploiting a non-renewable resource, and Alberta is using part of hers to reduce the provincial debt. When the oil is all gone, the province will at least be free of debt and able to carry on.

During the 1939-1953 inflation, when government revenues were buoyant, it would have been possible for the Coalition here to make substantial reductions in the debt. That would have also helped the federal government in its efforts to control wartime and post-war inflation.

It would also have left the province in shape for substantial borrowing to meet a depression, since that is the only way a province can combat deflation. The Social Credit government in Alberta has put that province in shape to weather a depression. Its predecessors did not. We face the same situation here that Aberhart faced in Alberta in 1935.

FOR GREGORY

There's little excuse for a man of Gunderson's training being found in such an irresponsible and illiterate political group; so he can only blame himself for the fate awaiting him on November 24.

In full view of the petty performance of the three local yes-yessers, during the recent hurried more-tax-session of the Legislature, Victorians will doubtless seize this opportunity to partially correct the grave error somehow blundered into last June, when Victoria elected three rabid Social Crediters. We, bluish in shame before a saner Canada.

Now, however, with one of our members resigned, we have our first chance to show that we are not totally mad. We have the chance to place a new member with "the voice of sanity" in between the remaining two. That "voice of sanity" from the mouth of George Gregory will ring round our legislative chamber during its next sitting. A native-born to represent us with all the inborn saneness of his illustrious ancestry.

Apparently Bennett can find no one within his elected Social fold who knows anything at all about money matters; well, that's Bennett's tough luck. That deep and typical Social Credit deficiency should surely encourage Victorians to elect a good solid Liberal, with good social and business experience, to protect the interests of all the people, financial and otherwise. George Gregory's the man.

Victoria! Let's show the world we're not all crackpots.

UNCONVINCED

To my sure and certain knowledge, Kipling did not write the ambiguous piffle quoted in the Times as his poetry, which describes the world as "chained." As a Britisher, I refuse to be chained, no matter how celestial the links.

A. J. Cameron, writer of Kipling, asks if J. Shrapnel Barter, under his command in 1916, is any connection of mine.

J. S. Barter was my cousin, killed in World War One, and what this dead soldier has to do with Kipling is another blue mystery.

Kipling wrote that East was not West, and never would be; and true poets, such as Kipling, don't refute their own arguments. Letters must be short. It's only the rest of this newspaper that is allowed to be long-winded.

DOUBLE TROUBLE

If anyone says "It's no good thinking you can do two things at once — or not properly anyhow," the short answer is I think that most of us have got to.

—Jacqueline Dickens speaking in the BBC's Home Service.

MOST PROFITABLE

There are many reasons why, despite the great problems and dangers involved, men will eventually travel to the other planets. Space-flight will result in a tremendous expansion of scientific knowledge, for we can have only a very restricted view of the universe while we are still confined to a single planet. And scientific knowledge, it must never be forgotten, is the most profitable of all investments — quite apart from its own intrinsic value.

—Arthur C. Clarke, B.Sc., F.R.S.

Au Revoir

THIS is column No. 2,550, and it will be my last for a time, at any rate. As this appears, I shall be winging my way to Ottawa to take part in the ceremonies attendant upon the opening of the federal House and to receive my official induction into my new responsibilities.

I find it rather difficult to write at a time like this. After being so long in the provincial sphere of public affairs, to find oneself suddenly elevated to the national scene under such circumstances is a step which causes one a lot of heart-searching. It inspires a feeling of humility on the one hand, while at the same time constituting a challenge. I only hope I shall be able to rise to that challenge and that I shall not let either the women or the men of British Columbia down.

You will notice that I mention the women first, for it is to them that I chiefly owe this opportunity to broaden my scope of public service. Ever since I first entered political life in 1941, the women have consistently and loyally supported and encouraged me. And that even goes for the last election, despite my defeat.

They have rallied around me in my other public facet, that of the writer of this column—of which I can only say it is "a poor thing but mine own." And in the last few days, of the hundreds of telegrams, letters and flowers that have poured in upon me from all across the Dominion as far away as Newfoundland, the greater number have been from women.

As for that flood of heart-warming messages, one of the most heart-warming features has been the high incidence of congratulatory and good wishes from men and women of other political stripes than my own, a tribute which has touched me as conclusive evidence of the innate goodness of Canadians, their ability to rise above political partisanship in any narrow form.

To the hundreds who have telephoned, written and wired since the news of the honor which has so unexpectedly fallen upon me, may I say that I have been literally overwhelmed by their spontaneous reaction to the news. I shall endeavor to answer each one personally.

But that task, coupled with the many others that have accrued with my translation into the wider sphere of national service, necessitates my disappearance from this corner of the Times for the first time in 10 years—since I started this column on October 5, 1943. To my many faithful readers I can only say: "Thank you and au revoir."

Guns on Formosa

THE MIST delicately veiling the steep mountainside (which everyone professionally called the "impact area") suddenly unravelled and shrank into wisps. The tough, grinning soldiers of the Chinese gun team, who had come to this through years of war and from distant provinces, stirred into a bustle of activity under their be-fronced camouflage net. From the other side of the bean-field, the wiry young battery executive officer began shouting the count harshly and loudly.

The gun team leader responded, while the spade-holder at the tail of the gun carriage opened his mouth comically wide, to protect his ear drums from the noise of firing. "Fire," bellowed the exec.

Three guns crashed out at once, and soon dust plumed up from the distant mountainside. The divisional commander, smart, soldierly and a graduate of Leavenworth, grinned his pleasure. The division's American liaison officer, a cheerful young major fresh from the line in Korea, turned to the Chinese general happily to say the shooting was "damn good for the first round."

The gun team leader, grinning too, patted his .75 pack howitzer, while his number two man cleared the gun and rammed home the second shell.

This little scene was typical of a good many scenes of a day spent visiting one of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's poorer divisions, which is just being brought up to combat-worthiness. One remembered the Chinese Army of the past—the topped and bearded files of new recruits that the gun team had once walked with; the wretched, maltreated equipment that was all they had; the careless, ignorant officers who stole their pay and rice. For one who so remembered, the scene in the bean-field was profoundly moving.

But the sharp contrast between past and present does not justify mere vague enthusiasm. The generalissimo, the prime minister, Gen. Chen Cheng, who began the army reorganization, and the brilliantly able army commander, Gen. Sun Li-jen, have done great things with the help of the American military advisory group under General Chase. Yet it is important to realize very precisely just what those things are and what they mean.

From the beaten remnants of forty-five armies, then, they have formed twenty-eight Chinese divisions, of which approximately twenty-one are included in the American aid program. By the wise insistence of Gen. Li-jen, these are light divisions, adapted to move over the gruelling, almost roadless Chinese terrain.

They have a full strength of 11,000 men, a sensible minimum of mechanized transport, and one battalion of .75s as divisional artillery. These divisions are in turn backed up, at the army level, by battalions of 105s as army artillery, plus some tanks.

The troops are properly fed, regularly paid, reasonably housed, and continuously and toughly trained, which they appear to enjoy. All the American advisers agree, with an enthusiasm rare among American officers in their position, that these Chinese soldiers will fight and fight well, if and when they are called upon to do so.

In the last year, the generalissimo's air force of approximately eight groups has also made immense strides under the determined leadership of Gen. Wang Shung-min, "Tiger" Wang of the old days, who used to make the miraculous Chinese air warping net somehow work with no visible assets but string and chewing gum.

Such are the credit items on the balance sheet. The main debit can be stated bleakly and simply. These Chinese forces on Formosa are not ready and are not being got ready to accomplish any known and worthwhile mission.

The air force and the smaller and less satisfactory navy are very far from adequate for the defense of Formosa. The air force and navy are hopelessly inadequate to support a return to the mainland. Meanwhile the army is needlessly large for Formosa's defense. But even if a turn of world events provides the Chinese with American air, naval and logistical support for a landing on the mainland, the present Chinese Army is not up to this task.

Judy Garland Comeback

HOLLYWOOD (UP)—Judy Garland explained today her "comeback" movie has had rough sledding because "it meant so much to me and we want it to be good."

The brown-eyed singer is back before the movie cameras for the first time since she left MGM in a flurry of sad headlines four years ago.

So far it hasn't been cinematic smooth sailing on the set of "A Star Is Born," a musical version of the old Janet Gaynor-Fredric March favorite.

Her first co-star, Cary Grant, was replaced by James Mason. The picture is on its third cameraman; a musical arranger left in a huff.

"I was nervous and scared when I started 'A Star Is Born,'" she grinned. "I'd gotten away from movies and taken up something new, the stage, and then four years later come back to movies again. I kept thinking, oh, I hope I make good."

"I understand he was on the verge of a breakdown."

"We started shooting in regular size. But our partner in our independent movie company wanted it in 'cinemascope.' I didn't. We'd been shooting eight days and started over in cinemascope. We got a cinemascope cameraman but we didn't like his work, so we got another cameraman who hadn't worked in cinemascope before."

"When it's your own company and money making a picture, you take an interest in every phase. At MGM I didn't care whether they got two or three shots a day. But now I feel such a part of this picture, I've been in on all the meetings."

Judy appears more mature, confident and happy than when she made her last musical at MGM, "Summer Stock." She thinks she's grown up now, and, she laughed, "it's about time."

"I was nervous and scared when I started 'A Star Is Born,'" she grinned. "I'd gotten away from movies and taken up something new, the stage, and then four years later come back to movies again. I kept thinking, oh, I hope I make good."

'TRIUMPH AND TRAGEDY'

Orient Settled Without U.K.

Churchill Had No Say in Yalta's Big Issue; Rhine Battle Begins

(This is another installment of Volume VI of the war memoirs of Winston Churchill, Britain's Prime Minister. Other installments will be carried daily.)

By WINSTON S. CHURCHILL

The Far East part of our formal discussions at Yalta, I was aware that the Americans intended to raise with the Russians the question of Soviet participation in the Pacific war. We had touched on this in general terms at Teheran, and in December, 1944, Stalin had made certain specific proposals about Russia's post-war claims in these regions to Mr. Harriman in Moscow.

The American military authorities estimated that it would take 18 months after the surrender of Germany to defeat Japan. Russian help would reduce heavy American casualties. The invasion of the Japanese home islands was at this time still in the planning stage, and General MacArthur had entered Manila only on the second day of the Yalta Conference. The first experimental explosion of the atomic bomb was not to take place for another five months. The large Japanese army in Manchuria could, if Russia still remained neutral, be thrown into battle for Japan itself.

With all this in mind President Roosevelt and Mr. Harriman discussed the Russian territorial demands in the Far East with Stalin on February 8 (1945). The only other person present apart from the Russian interpreter was Mr. Charles E. Bohlen, of the State Department, who was also interpreted. Two days later the conversation was continued, and the Russian terms were accepted, with certain modifications, which Mr. Harriman mentioned in his testimony before the United States Senate in 1951. In return Russia agreed to enter the war against Japan within two or three months after the surrender of Germany.

Russians Desired Far East Naval Base

During the same afternoon, in a private talk with Stalin, I asked him about Russian wishes in the Far East. He said they wanted a naval base, such as Port Arthur. The Americans would prefer the ports to be under international control, but the Russians wanted to have their interests safeguarded.

My record of these negotiations is preserved in a telegram which I sent to the Dominion Prime Minister on July 5.

In the most rigid secrecy Stalin informed Roosevelt and myself at the Crimea Conference of the Soviet Government's willingness to enter the war against Japan two or three months after Germany's surrender, on the conditions stated below:

- Preservation of the status quo in Outer Mongolia.
- Restoration of the Russian rights lost in the year 1904, viz.:
 - Recovery of Southern Sakhalin and the islands adjacent to it.
 - Internationalisation of the commercial port of Dairen, with safeguards for the pre-eminent interests of the USSR and restoration of the lease of Port Arthur as a Soviet naval base.
 - Joint operation by a Soviet-Chinese company of the Chinese Eastern Railway and the South Manchuria Railway, providing an outlet to Dairen, on the understanding that the USSR will be safeguarded and that China will retain full sovereignty in Manchuria.

viding an outlet to Dairen, on the understanding that the pre-eminent interests of the USSR will be safeguarded and that China will retain full sovereignty in Manchuria.

(c) Acquisition by the USSR of the Kurile Islands.

- These conditions were embodied in a personal agreement between Roosevelt, Stalin, and myself. The agreements recognised that Chiang Kai-shek's concurrence to the conditions would be required, and Roosevelt undertook to obtain this concurrence on advice from Stalin. We all three agreed to see that the Soviet claims were fulfilled without question following the defeat of Japan. The agreement contained nothing else, except an expression of Russian readiness to enter into a treaty of alliance with China with the object of helping the latter to throw off the Japanese yoke.

Britain Approved Without Taking Part

I must make it clear that though on behalf of Great Britain I joined in the agreement, neither I nor Eden took any part in making it. It was regarded as an American affair and was certainly of prime interest to their military operations. It was not for us to claim to shape it. Anyhow we were not consulted but only asked to approve. This we did. In the United States there have been many reproaches about the concessions made to Soviet Russia. The responsibility rests with their own representatives. To us the problem was remote and secondary. It would have been wrong for us to get in their way unless we had some very solid reason.

It was my turn to preside at our final dinner on February 10. Several hours before Stalin was due to arrive a squad of Russian soldiers came to the Vorontsov Villa. They locked the doors on either side of the reception rooms which were to be used for dinner. Guards were posted and no one was allowed to enter. They then searched everywhere—under the tables and behind the walls. My staff had to go outside the building in order to get from their offices to their own quarters. All being in order, the Marshal arrived in a most cordial mood, and the President a little later.

Stalin Style Toast Draws Objection

At the Yusupov dinner Stalin had proposed the King's health in a manner which, though meant to be friendly and respectful, was not to my liking. He had said that in general he had always been against kings, and that he was on the side of the people and not that of any king, but in this war he had learned to honor and esteem the British people, who honored and respected their King, so he would propose the health of the King of England. I was not satisfied with this treatment of the toast, and I asked Molotov to explain that Stalin's scruples might be avoided by proposing on future occasions the health of "the three heads of States." This having been agreed, I now put into practice the new procedure:

I propose the health of His Majesty the King, the President of the United States, and President Kalinin of the USSR, the three heads of the three States.

To this the President, who seemed very tired, replied, "The Prime Minister's toast," he said, "recalls many memories. In 1933 my wife visited a school in our country. In one of the classrooms she saw a map with a large blank space on it. She asked what was the blank space, and was told they were not allowed to mention the place—it was the Soviet Union. That incident was one of the reasons why I wrote to President Kalinin asking him to send a representative to Washington to discuss the opening of diplomatic relations. That is the history of our recognition of Russia."

It was now my task to propose the health of Marshal Stalin.

Churchill Defends Two-Party System

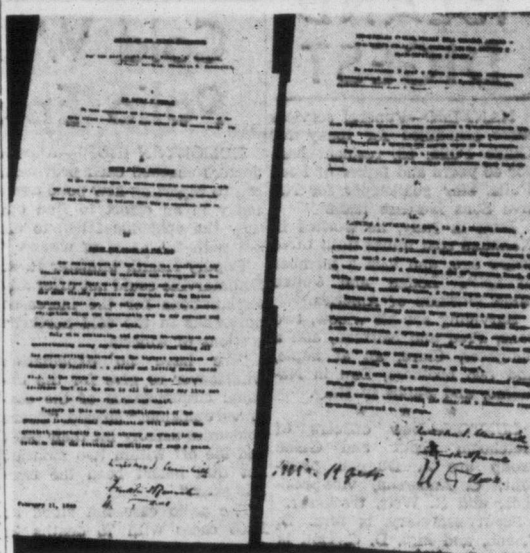

Stalin replied in the heat of temper, and I had the feeling that he thought the "heads of States" procedure was well adapted to our triple meetings. I have no record of his actual words. Including interpreters, we were less than a dozen, and after the formalities we talked together in twos and threes. I had mentioned that there would be a General Election in the United Kingdom after the defeat of Hitler. Stalin thought my position was assured, "since the people would understand that they needed a leader, and who could be a better leader than he who had won the victory?" I explained that we had two parties in Britain and I only belonged to one of them. "One party is much better," said Stalin with deep conviction.

"This led the President to speak of the British Constitution. He said that I was always talking about what the Constitution allowed and what it did not allow, but actually there was no Constitution. However, an unwritten Constitution was better than a written one. It was like the Atlantic Charter; the document did not exist, yet all the world knew about it. Among his papers he had found one copy signed by himself and me, but strange to say both signatures were in his own handwriting. I replied that the Atlantic Charter was not a law, but a star.

Pleasant Evening Of Story-Telling

As our talks continued Stalin spoke of what he called "the unreasonable sense of discipline in the Kaiser's Germany," and recounted an incident which occurred when he was in Leipzig as a young man. He had come with two hundred German Communists to attend an International Conference. Their train arrived punctually at the station, but there was no official to collect their tickets. All the German Communists therefore waited docilely for two hours to get off the platform. So none of them were able to attend the meeting for which they had travelled far.

In this easy manner the evening passed away agreeably. When the Marshal left many of our British party had assembled in the hall of the villa, and I called for "three cheers for Marshal Stalin," which was warmly given.

There was another occasion during our stay at Yalta when things had not gone so smoothly. Mr. Roosevelt, who was host at a luncheon, said that he and I always referred to Stalin in our secret telegrams as "Uncle Joe." I had suggested that he should tell him this privately, but instead the President made it into a jocular statement to the company. This led to a difficult moment. Stalin took offence. "When can I leave this table?" he asked in anger. Mr. Byrnes saved the situation with an apt remark. "After all," he said, "you do not mind talking about Uncle Sam, so why should Uncle Joe be so bad?" At this the Marshal subsided, and Molotov later assured me that he understood the joke. He already knew that he was called Uncle Joe by many people abroad, and he realised that the name had been given in a friendly way and as a term of affection.

The next day, Sunday, February 11, was the last of our Crimean visit.

That same afternoon Sarah and I drove to Sebastopol, where the liner Franconia was berthed. She had come through the Dardanelles and acted as the headquarters ship, which could also be used in case accommodation on shore at Yalta broke down. We went on board, where I was joined by Sir Alan Brooke and the other Chiefs of Staff. From the deck we looked out over the port, which the Germans had practically destroyed, though now it was full of activity again and in the night-time blazing with lights.

I was anxious to see the field of Balaklava, and I asked Brigadier Peake of the war office Intelligence Staff to look up all the details of the action and prepare himself to show us round. On the afternoon of February 13 I visited the scene, accompanied by the Chiefs of Staff and the Russian admiral commanding the Black Sea Fleet, who had orders from Moscow to be in attendance on me whenever I came ashore. We were a little shy and very tactful with our host. But we need not have worried. As Peake pointed to the line on which the Light Brigade had been drawn up the Russian admiral pointed in almost the same direction and exclaimed, "The German tanks came at us from over there." A little later Peake explained the Russian dispositions, and pointed to the hills where their infantry had stood, whereupon the Russian admiral intervened with obvious pride: "That is where a Russian battery fought and died to the last man." I thought it right at this juncture to explain that we were studying a different war, "war of dynasties, not of peoples." Our host gave no sign of comprehension, but seemed perfectly satisfied. So all passed off very pleasantly.

Scene of Immortal Light Brigade Charge

Before us lay the valley down which the Light Brigade had charged, and we could see the ridge which had been so gallantly defended by the Highlanders. As the scene lay before us one could grasp the situation which Lord Raglan had faced some 50 years earlier. We had visited his tomb in the morning, and were greatly struck by the care and respect with which it had been treated by the Russians.

I had much looked forward to the sea voyage through the Dardanelles to Malta, but I felt it my duty to make a lightning trip to Athens and survey the Greek scene after the recent troubles.

At Alexandria I went on board HMS Aurora. I had taken no part in the discussions between the President and the Middle East sovereigns who had been invited to meet him, King Farouk, Haile Selassie, and Ibn Saud. These conversations had taken place on board the Quincy, which had been anchored in the Bitter Lake. Later that morning the American cruiser steamed into Alexandria harbor, and shortly before noon I went on board for what was to be my last talk with the President. We gathered afterwards in his cabin for an informal family luncheon. I was accompanied by Sarah and Randolph, and Mr. Roosevelt's daughter, Mrs. Boettiger, joined us, together with Harry Hopkins and Mr. Winant. The President seemed placid and frail. I felt that he had a slender contact with life. I was not to see him again. We had a affectionate farewells. That afternoon the Presidential party sailed for home.

After the departure of our American friends I had arranged a meeting with Ibn Saud. He had been transported to the conference with the President in the American destroyer Murphy, and travelled with all the splendor of an Eastern potentate, with an entourage of some 50 persons, including two sons, his Prime Minister, his Astrologer, and flocks of sheep to be killed according

GREATEST HEATING VALUE!

CALL FOR COMOX COAL

How many Canadians work for Inco?

"Well, in the city of Sudbury there are upwards of 50,000 people, and 20,000 more in the mining communities around Sudbury. A large proportion of them work for Inco or have jobs that wouldn't exist if it weren't for the nickel mines and plants. Many more work at the great nickel refinery at Port Colborne, Ontario."

"It must cost a lot for wages?"

"Yes, dear, in 1952 the International Nickel Company paid over $65,000,000 in wages and salaries to Canadian workers. And of course thousands more people earned a living producing the food, clothing, furniture and other things bought by nickel employees, and the machinery, equipment, lumber and power used in the nickel mines and plants. So Inco really helps to create employment all over Canada."

SO MUCH MORE DRIVING EASE and SAFETY CAN BE YOURS

You just slip into "high" and go! You can drive all day without shifting... maneuver through traffic... stop for red lights... glide off again with a smooth, silent surge of power. You soon forget about gearshift and clutch! There's nothing new to learn—if you wish to back up, or need extra power when driving through sand or mud—just shift in the familiar way.

Now you can have the most effortless parking and steering you will find in any car. From the moment you start your Dodge engine, hydraulic power takes over 3/4ths of the steering effort. You can't imagine how easy it is to park—to drive through traffic—to control your car on bumpy, rutted roads. You can turn the wheel with one finger—even when your Dodge is standing still.

to Moslem rites. On February 17 his reception was organized at the Hotel du Lac at Fayoum oasis, from which we had temporarily removed all the residents. A number of social problems arose. I had been told that neither smoking nor alcoholic beverages were allowed in the Royal Presence. As I was the host at luncheon I raised the matter at once, and said to the interpreter that if it was the religion of His Majesty to deprive himself of smoking and alcohol I must point out that my rule of life prescribed as an absolutely sacred rite smoking cigars and also the drinking of alcohol before, after, and if need be during all meals and in the intervals between them. The King graciously accepted the position. His own cup-bearer from Mecca offered me a glass of water from its sacred well, the most delicious that I had ever tasted.

It had been indicated to me beforehand that there would be an interchange of presents during the course of our meeting. I had therefore made what I thought were adequate arrangements. "Tommy" Thompson bought for me in Cairo for about a 100 pounds; at the Government's expense, a little case of very choice perfumes, which I presented. We were all given jewelled swords, diamond-hilted, and other splendid gifts. Sarah had an enormous portmanteau which Ibn Saud provided for "your womenfolk." It appeared that we were rather outclassed in gifts, so I told the King, "What we bring are but tokens. His Majesty's Government have decided to present you with the finest motor-car in the world, with every comfort for peace and every security against hostile action." This was later done.

Striking Impression Made by Ibn Saud

King Ibn Saud made a striking impression. My admiration for him was deep, because of his unflinching loyalty to us. He was always at his best in the darkest hours. He was now over 70, but had lost none of his warrior vigor. He still lived the existence of a patriarchal king of the Arabian desert, with his forty living sons and the 70 ladies of his harem, and three of the four official wives, as prescribed by the Prophet, one vacancy being kept.

We returned from Fayoum to Cairo, stopping on the way at the British Ambassador's desert house, where we had tea. I stayed for a few days at the Casey villa, and had interviews both with King Farouk, and the President of Syria, at which we talked of the recent difficulties in the Middle East, many of which still continue. Sarah meanwhile unpacked the portmanteau which Ibn Saud had given her. It contained many splendid and beautiful Arab robes and several vessels of rare and delicious perfumes. At the bottom were half a dozen cardboard boxes of different sizes. One of these contained a diamond with the valuation £1,200 attached. There were a number of other gems and several necklaces of Red Sea pearls. Anthony had a similar set of presents, though in his case the diamond was adjusted to his rank. When eventually I reported on these matters to the Cabinet we told them that of course we should not keep for ourselves any of the valuables. In fact the Treasury, to whom they were given, almost paid with them for the motor-car which I had taken it upon myself to present to Ibn Saud.

Issue of Poland Disturbs Commons

On February 19 I flew back to England. Northolt was fog-bound, and our plane was diverted to Lyneham. I drove to London by car, stopping at Reading to join my wife, who had come to meet me.

At noon on February 27 I asked the House of Commons to approve the results of the Crimea Conference.

Poland was the issue which disturbed the House. "The home of the Poles is settled," I said. "Are they to be masters in their own house? Are they to be free, as we in Britain and the United States or France are free? Are their sovereignty and their independence to be untrammelled, or are they to become a mere projection of the Soviet State, forced against their will to be an armed minority to adopt a Communist or totalitarian system? I am putting the case in all its bluntiness. It is a touchstone far more sensitive and vital than the drawing of frontier lines. Where does Poland stand? Where do we all stand on this?"

"Most solemn declarations have been made by Marshal Stalin and the Soviet Union that the sovereign independence of Poland is to be maintained, and this decision is now joined in both by Great Britain and the United States."

I felt bound to proclaim my confidence in Soviet good faith in the hope of procuring it. In this I was encouraged by Stalin's behavior about Greece.

"The impression I brought back from the Crimea, and all my other contacts," I said, "is that Marshal Stalin and the Soviet leaders wish to live in honorable friendship and equality with the Western democracies. I feel also that their word in their bond. I know of no Government which stands to its obligations, even in its own despite, more solidly than the Russian Soviet Government. I decline absolutely to embark here on a discussion about Russian good faith. It is quite evident that these matters touch the whole future of the world. Some indeed would be the fortunes of mankind if some awful schism arose between the Western democracies and the Russian Soviet Union."

The general reaction of the House was unqualified support for the attitude we had taken at the Crimea Conference. There was however intense moral feeling about our obligations to the Poles, who had suffered so much at German hands and on whose behalf at a last resort we had gone to war. It is not permitted to those charged with dealing with events in times of war or crisis to confine themselves purely to the statement of broad general principles on which good people agree. They have to take definite decisions from day to day. They have to adopt postures which must be solidly maintained, otherwise how can any combinations for action be maintained? It is easy, after the Germans are beaten, to condemn those who did their best to hearten the Russian military effort and to keep in harmonious contact with our great Ally, who had suffered so frightfully. What would have happened if we had quarrelled with Russia while the Germans still had two or three hundred divisions on the fighting front? Our hopeful assumptions were soon to be falsified. Still, they were the only ones possible at the time.

Despite their defeat in the Ardennes, the Germans decided to give battle west of the Rhine, instead of withdrawing across it to gain a breathing-space. General Eisenhower planned three operations. In the first he would destroy the enemy west of the river and close up to it, then he would form bridgeheads, and finally drive deep into Germany. In this last phase there would be two simultaneous thrusts. One would start from the lower Rhine below Duisburg, skirt the northern edge of the Ruhr, which would be enveloped and later subdued, and drive across the North German plain towards Bremen, Hamburg, and the Baltic. The second thrust would be from Karlsruhe to Kassel, whence there were options northwards or eastwards according to circumstances.

Bradley Gave Wrong View of Argument

We reviewed this plan at Malta with some concern. We doubted whether we were strong enough for two great simultaneous operations, and felt that the northern advance by Montgomery's Twenty-first Army Group would be much the more important. The matter was hotly argued by the Combined Chiefs of Staff. General Bradley attributes to Montgomery most of the pressure which was brought to bear. This is not a fair assessment. The British view as a whole was that the northern thrust, with its consequences to the Ruhr, was paramount. In a second respect we also questioned the plan. We were anxious that Montgomery should cross the Rhine as soon as possible, and not be held back merely because German forces were still on the near bank at some distant point.

The first task was to clear the enemy from the Colmar pocket. This was completed at the beginning of February by the First French Army, helped by four American divisions. More important, and leading to a long and arduous battle, was Montgomery's advance to the Rhine north of Cologne. A thrust from the Nijmegen salient by General Crerar's First Canadian Army, composed of the XXXth British and 2nd Canadian Corps, began on February 8 (1945), and was directed south-eastwards between the Rhine and the Meuse. The defences were strongly and obstinately held, the ground was sodden, and both rivers had overflowed their banks. The first day's objective were reached, but then the advance slowed down.

Canadians Renew Attack on Xanten

General Simpson's Ninth U.S. Army, which had been placed under Montgomery's orders for the operation, was to strike northwards from the river Roer to join the British, but they could not cross the Roer until the great dams twenty miles upstream were captured. The First U.S. Army seized them on February 10, but the Germans smashed open the valves and the river downstream became uncrossable until the 23rd. The Ninth U.S. Army then opened their attack. As their momentum gathered the Canadian Army renewed their attacks towards Xanten, and the XXXth Corps met the Americans at Geldern on March 3. By then the right flank of the Ninth Army had reached the Rhine near Dusseldorf, and the two armies combined to expel the enemy from their bridgehead at Wassen. On March 10 18 German divisions were all back across the Rhine, except for 53,000 prisoners and unnumbered dead.

Farther south General Bradley's Twelfth Army Group proceeded to drive the enemy across the Rhine on the whole eighty-mile stretch between Dusseldorf and Koblenz. On March 7 a stroke of fortune was boldly accepted. The 9th Armored Division of the First U.S. Army found the railway bridge at Remagen partly destroyed but still usable. They promptly threw their advance guard across, other troops quickly followed, and soon over four divisions were on the far bank and a bridgehead several miles deep established. This was no part of Eisenhower's plan, but it proved an excellent adjunct, and the Germans had to divert considerable forces from further north to hold the Americans in check.

Only one large pocket of Germans now remained west of the Rhine. These stood in a great salient formed by the Moselle from Koblenz to Trier and thence along the Siegfried Line back to the Rhine. The Allies attacked on March 15 against stiff opposition. Good progress was made west of Zweibrücken, but east of it the Germans held firm. It availed them little, for Patton had reached the Rhine north of Koblenz, and he turned five divisions southward across the lower Moselle. The stroke cut in behind the salient. It came as a complete surprise, and met feeble resistance. By March 21 it had reached Worms and joined the XXXth Corps, which had burst through the bulge south of Trier.

The defenders of the renowned and dreaded Siegfried Line were thus cut off, and in

IT'S MY VIEW

By BILL WALKER, Sports Editor

"Did you play under Ty Cobb?"

The question was put to Earl Whitehill in the depths of the Empress Hotel labyrinth of corridors Monday as the smoke poured from the WIL committee room alongside.

This was the annual meeting of the Western International Baseball League and Earl, the one-time Detroit and major league pitching star, was the centre of a bull session.

The other session in progress at the same time, as here-tore mentioned, plenty of smoke, but little fire. Thus the tongue wagging.

Walker

"Sure I did," answered Earl. "What kind of a guy was he," the questioner asked.

"I'll tell you a story about Ty and you can judge for yourself," was the gist of Whitehill's reply.

And, in effect, this is the yarn: "I had gone up to Detroit late in 1922 and had a pretty fair season in 1923, winning 17 and losing nine. Then came that second full year—the sophomore season. That's the real test of a ballplayer. After one season they start to catch up to you.

And I was no exception to the rule. "I was having trouble getting by the fourth and fifth innings. And after this went on for a time I noticed that every time I got in trouble, I got the signal for a curve ball. I'd throw the curve and then another and another. Pretty soon that curve ball wasn't breaking as it should and I'd be on my way.

"It was then that I realized that Cobb was calling ALL the pitches from centre field. One day the matter came to a head with Ty giving me what for and me giving it right back.

"I was a brash kid in those days and I told Cobb that I'd pitch the game the way I wanted. Sure enough as soon as he'd get back to centre field, there'd be the signal again for the curve.

Cobb on the Run—Literally

"Well, I was due to pitch this particular day. It was my turn, I knew it, but Cobb hadn't told me to warm up and I wasn't stirring off the bench until he did.

"About five minutes before game time one of the coaches said: 'you'd better get warmed up, Earl, you only have about five minutes. I figured that Cobb was hoping I'd go in cold, so I warmed up and was ready.

"Sure enough, came the fourth or fifth inning and I was in a jam. Up came the signal for a curve ball. I shook it off and Cobb came running in from centre field. He walked around me in a big circle and his remarks weren't complimentary. Neither were mine in return and Cobb finally returned to centre field.

"I looked down for the signal again, and there it was—the curve ball.

"I shook my head and Cobb stormed back to the mound. We repeated the previous performance, but by this time the umpires were urging the game to go on.

"This occurred several times but I stuck to my guns, finished the game, and won.

"I had never won my point, pitching the way I wanted to, and Cobb never gave me any trouble after that. Matter of fact he hardly spoke to me, unless he had to."

Earl's Record One of the Best

Earl didn't say so, but the record books do. The cocky young kid who defied Cobb went on to become one of the winningest pitchers of his era.

Only in three of his 17 years in the major leagues with Detroit, Washington, Cleveland and Chicago did he lose more than he won. His over-all total was 218 victories and 185 defeats, his best year coming in 1933 with Washington when he won 22 and lost eight.

And probably all because a brazen youngster did what few others dared to do—defy the manager who also was one of the greatest players of his time. Some say the greatest. Despite this peculiar situation, Earl had a kind word for Cobb.

"If you hustled, you could play on his club," he said.

Earl is still delivering baseballs—but not to batters. Now he fires his pitch at league heads and clubowners. He sells baseballs and he was as convincing to the WIL directors as he was in the American League. That foul tip that lands in your lap next summer will have a Spalding label on it.

Kwong, Vessels With Esks

WINNIPEG, Man. (BUP)—

The Edmonton Eskimos, hopeful of capturing the western interprovincial football finals in two games straight, will fly here today for Wednesday's crucial game with the Blue Bombers.

The hard-charging Eskimos took the opening game in Edmonton 25-7. The third, if necessary, will be played in Edmonton next Saturday. Coach Darrell Royal's igloo dwellers went into stiff workouts Monday and will work out here this evening.

A crowd of 17,000 was expected to jam the new Winnipeg Stadium on Armistice Day for the second game.

Injured halfback Billy Vessels and fullback Normie Kwong, who did not see action in Edmonton Saturday, were expected to make the trip, but it was not known whether they would be ready to play.

George Traflet's Winnipeg Blue Bombers battle camp stood solid, with only one flaw today, as he predicted an overwhelming win.

He will field veteran "Indian" Jack Jacobs at quarterback, but the rest of his team might line up without the services of fullback Lorne Benson.

WIFU officials ordered the series to be played on a points basis, with two points for a win and one for a tie. If the series goes three games and the teams are tied, overtime of two ten-minute halves will be played at Saturday's game. If the teams still are tied, a fourth game will be played.

UBC has won the cup seven of the last nine years and have been practicing hard in preparation for the coming clash. The club has been unable to win a game in Miller Cup competition this year due to inexperience and the fact that seven lettermen have been declared ineligible with poor grades.

Cougars Boosters Club Victoria Cougars Boosters Club held its first meeting of the season at Memorial Arena Monday night.

Jack Kersey was elected president; George Geddie, vice-president; Merna Jenkin, secretary; treasurer; Esther Loreson, publicity director; Shirley Lee-man, Richard Hudlan and F. E. Ted Proctor, executive.

A tall, slender defenseman, Leachman came up through the Victoria Minor Hockey Association and received a good grounding while playing junior hockey here. He has had two seasons in the fast Commercial League.

Leachman made the club but as Lethbridge had already signed its limit of imports, he was loaned for the season to Calgary Buffaloes of the same circuit.

He also signed a contract with New York Rangers and will attend their training camp next season.

Former President Returned; Brown Rumored to Spokane

By BILL WALKER

One surprise popped out of the Western International League baseball grab bag Monday and a couple more could conceivably follow today.

Opening day of the scheduled two-day annual meeting saw former president Bob Abel elected as president over the incumbent Bob Brown. It will be Abel's 10th term as president.

Abel of Tacoma, Wash., was president in 1941 and '42 and, following under Mr. Brown as head through 1946-52 until replaced by Brown last year.

Abel was league secretary, treasurer and legal adviser last year under Brown.

In his acceptance remarks, Abel said: "I deeply regret the league finds it necessary to make a change in the league office at this time as I would have much preferred to have stayed on working under Mr. Brown as secretary. However, the decision has been made and I will do everything in my power to make a success of the confidence that has been placed with me."

Brown, who was named honorary president, expressed his well wishes to Abel and saw a great future for the WIL.

"This league cannot be allowed to die," the man who was honored for 50 years in professional baseball at the 1951 meeting of the National Association of Professional Baseball Leagues, said.

The surprise move was believed occasioned by the feeling that a general cut down in operational expenses was necessary, Abel being elected on a part-time basis as was the case before last year.

Abel and Brown will represent the WIL at the annual meeting of the National Association at Atlanta, Ga., Nov. 30-Dec. 3.

Season to Open Week Later

Election of other officers was held over until today.

The league also approved a later starting date for next season, the playing year beginning April 29 or 30, and ending Labor Day, Sept. 6, one week shorter in duration than last season.

Possibility of a split season or a post-season playoff was to be discussed today as were the questions of a shorter spring training season, salary and player limits.

Though Brown declined to comment on his future in baseball, owner Roy Hotchkiss of the Spokane Indians, intimated the former general manager of the Vancouver Capilanos and now out of an active part in baseball may be interested in a part of the Spokane franchise.

Hotchkiss, who earlier this year expressed a wish to be relieved of some of his duties, refused to elaborate, repeating "Brown may be interested; that's all."

When confronted with the question, Brown neatly dodged the issue, saying: "Spokane—that's a good baseball town and that's where I made my money to buy the Vancouver franchise."

Tacoma Interested in Franchise

League make-up for the forthcoming season was left in abeyance. Not represented at the meeting, Wenatchee was given until Nov. 24 to "make a definite showing of good faith," said Abel who assumes his new duties with the beginning of the new year.

Yakima Bears, also believed to be a league problem child with their professional baseball future in doubt, were represented by Fred Mercer Jr. And, as of now, the Bears are prepared to operate in 1954, providing that Mercer can secure additional civic support. Mercer insisted that he wouldn't run the club alone as he did last year, although refusing to write Yakima out of the league.

Concerning Yakima, Abel said: "To all intent and purpose, Yakima will be in."

However, Abel also expressed the thought that if the league is reduced to nine teams with the withdrawal of Wenatchee, the possibility of Tacoma re-entering the league would be strongly considered.

"There are sound business men behind the Tacoma move," said Abel, "and, if it is necessary to operate a 10-team league, with Wenatchee out, it wouldn't be feasible not to consider Tacoma."

Previously Tacoma interests were announced as being willing to state their case for a franchise if requested to do so. This is unlikely at the present time as a final decision on Wenatchee's status is not expected until Nov. 24 or possibly later.

Hockey Manslaughter Charge Trial Opens

BARRIE, Ont. (BUP)—Hockey defenseman Walter Fines faced the second day of his manslaughter trial today following testimony that he said "we're going to start a brawl" before he slammed an opposing player against the boards.

The other man died later of a fractured skull.

Fines appeared for the first time Monday before the Supreme Court of Ontario charged with manslaughter in the death of Robert Gillies, 18, a forward for the Collingwood Green shirts, March 4, 1952.

Coal judge George Gordon of Collingwood, who was at the Aurora end, testified that he saw Fines go up to the goal-tender and say "We are going to start a brawl." Gordon quoted the goalie as answering, "No, wait until two minutes before the game ends."

Gillies was hit about two minutes after that exchange, Gordon told the jury.

A doctor testified that Fines, 19, did not appear to be making a play for the puck when he slammed Gillies against the boards.

Dr. Robert Storey of Collingwood, the first Crown witness, said he was only 30 feet away when he saw Fines, playing defense for the Aurora Bears in the Junior B League, charge into Gillies.

"His head hit the boards with a terrific, sickening crash," Storey said. "I knew he could not have escaped injury of some kind."

"It was a little more rugged than I would call clean," Storey said under cross-examination, "but it was not offensive. It was a good hard game."

Carter, Savoie Ready

Montreal Scene Of Title Bout

MONTREAL (CP)—

Montreal's Athletic Commission today meets the managers of champion Jimmy Carter and Montreal's Armand Savoie to work out details of Wednesday night's lightweight championship fight.

Willie Ketchum, manager of the champion, has made it clear he considers his side was gypped in last spring's non-title fight here when Savoie took the decision—the split.

Willie wants no part of the judges who wrote the decision to that scrap. "They're prejudiced; they see only one man in the ring," says manager Ketchum, "and I'm going to insist none of them be on the list again."

Willie would also like to see Jack Dempsey as referee, or a referee attached to either the New York or Pennsylvania commissions. He figures a Montreal referee is far short on experience.

Names of the officials won't be announced until a few minutes before the fight. Tommy Sullivan and Maurice O'Connell are senior men on the Montreal commission staff.

LIGHT WORKOUTS

Both fighters had only light workouts Monday. Savoie weighed himself at 134½. Carter wouldn't give his own weight. The official weigh-in will be at noon Wednesday, along with the final medical examination.

During the heaviest part of his training, most of it at a camp in the Laurentian Mountains, Savoie-boxed 140 rounds, his handlers report. Carter is said to have engaged in only 55 rounds with his sparring partners, but he has had three fights in the last couple of months.

Advance sale of tickets was reported at $30,000 Monday night. Promoter Raoul Godbout was hopeful a sellout 70,000 would be reached, which would mean an attendance of around 17,500. Carter has a choice of 40 per cent of the gate or $25,000. Savoie's share is 12½ per cent of the gate.

Little Theatre Juniors Play Santa With 'Toy' Presentation

A new toy will be the price of admission to a charity performance planned for Dec. 16 by the Langham Court Little Theatre Guild.

The players will present two studio plays for children and the cast will be comprised largely of young members of the group.

Spokesman for the group, Mrs. Lesley Allen, says that the toys which are gathered will be presented to children dependent on city welfare at a special party Dec. 19.

She explains that they will be provided with a party, a special play and a Christmas tree. The toys will be distributed and other treats are included.

Parents sending their youngsters to the charity show should mark the outside of the gift parcel with the name of the item enclosed and the age group it would appeal to. Also donors should specify whether it is a gift for a boy or girl. Only new toys are acceptable.

Any person wishing to assist the players in this enterprise or donate a gift should contact Mrs. Allen at G 3571.

The Dog and the Bone

A DOG was crossing a plank bridge over a stream with a piece of meat in his mouth, when he happened to see his own reflection in the water. He thought it was another dog with a piece of meat twice as big; so he let go his own, and flew at the other dog to get the larger piece. But, of course, all that happened was that he got neither: for one was only a shadow, and the other was carried away by the current.

C (To not in time)

(A) "LILI" (Royal): Now and then there comes a picture that is positively enchanting.

It isn't made up of action, exciting plot or great scenes with great acting. Rather it is fleeting, tender, sometimes gay and other times sad, although always with a promise of a happy ending.

Such pictures are like dreams that aren't seen so much as felt.

When you leave them you leave with a smile, more at yourself than at the play. You say to yourself, "Puff! It was so light, so frothy. I won't remember it tomorrow." Although peculiarly enough, you do.

Such a picture is "Lili." Lili is Leslie Caron, a young girl in love with the gaiety and magic of carnival life and in love with love and with a gay magician in particular. However, in loving, Lili discovers that all isn't as breathless as it should be and when the gay one sends her on her way she is picked up by a heart-warming group of puppets who display the varied characters of their operator, Mel Ferrer.

With Ferrer and his sidekick, Jean Pierre Aumont, Lili climbs

the ladder of carnival stardom, cavorting with the puppets to the delight of the public. Unfortunately for Lili, however, she can't forget the magician. So in love is she with him in her wide-eyed, open-mouthed way that she can't see Ferrer who worships her. This, however, is understandable as Ferrer, a dancer who had to give up his art because of a war wound, is usually in a terrible temper.

There is one fifty little tune in "Lili." It is "Hi-Lili-Lo-Lo." But it is Miss Caron, her puppets and a very beautiful dialogue that rules the heart of a very delightful movie called "Lili."

PARADE? YES, BUT NO BANNER FOR WITNESSES

City manager Cecil Wyatt has refused Jehovah's Witnesses permission to erect a street banner in a downtown location advertising a convention to be held here Nov. 13, 14 and 15.

He turned down the request on grounds that there were no exceptional circumstances.

At the same time, the manager gave Witnesses permission to stage an automobile parade through the city on either the opening day or final day of their convention.

Two-Day Wind, Rain Storm in Italy Over

REGGIO CALABRIA, Italy (AP)—A two-day wind and rain storm that swept across the flood-stricken toe of Italy ended abruptly today, but left three small mountain communities isolated.

For the second time in less than three weeks, rain-filled torrents Monday cut roads and forced many inhabitants to flee. Flooded mountain torrents, fed by tremendous cloudbursts, took 35 lives and wrecked 7,000 homes in the same area Oct. 22.

Wary of School Board 'Bargain', Esquimalt Delays Grant of Land

Esquimalt council will seek bounded by Macaulay, Lyle and legal advice before approving Wichbury Streets.

IMPROVEMENTS, BUT NO LIGHT AT CRAIGFLOWER-TILlicum

There will be no traffic light for Craigflower at Tillicum Road, it was decided at an Esquimalt council meeting Monday night.

The Provincial Department of Public Works checked traffic at that point and advised council that it would only be permitted to operate a stop-and-go light there for two rush periods each day. A flashing light would be in order for 22 hours of the day.

Council, concerned with speeders on Craigflower, will instead adopt other recommendations of the provincial department—enlarge existing stop signs on Tillicum, reflectorize the signs and consider grading a vision-reducing bank.

There have been four recent accidents at the intersection.

RETURNING OFFICERS NAMED

Esquimalt council named James Elrick as returning officer and W. A. Brethour as deputy at a Monday night council meeting.

The pair will officiate at December 12 municipal elections.

Nominating day will be December 3 and a Court of Revision will sit at 7.30 p.m., December 16. It will be composed of Reeve A. C. Wurtele, Clr. G. K. Sammon and Clr. James Bryant.

Harold Todd Again Seeks Saanich Seat

Harold Todd, 1402 Andrews Road, announced today his candidacy for a council seat in the December municipal elections in Saanich.

Mr. Todd, a post office employee, was an unsuccessful candidate in last year's municipal elections. He is married and has two children, and is a member of the Independent Order of Foresters.

He is the first person so far to announce he will run as a candidate for one of the council seats.

There are three seats to be contested this year. Terms of office expire for Councillors H. K. Bate and Roy Wooten. The latter is expected to seek reelection on the council, but Mr. Bate is still undecided.

The third seat will be vacated by Clr. E. P. Cummins, who is contesting the reeveship this year.

"You should provide us with another playground to put the swings on," he said.

Clr. G. R. Guillemaud said the free transfer of municipal lands was unfair. He held the board might acquire two blocks in one place and three in another, with one municipality bearing the brunt. He thought the board should be required to buy each parcel and the cost be spread over the district.

Mr. Reeve's assertion that nothing in the provincial act calls for purchasing public property will be investigated by the municipal solicitor before the council will approve the estimates.

Meanwhile, Mr. Reeve promised, Esquimalt will "get a good bargain." He said the municipality has 10 per cent of the school children of the area and pays only 5.4 per cent of the school costs.

Death Ends Colorful Career Of Canon W. H. B. Scharpe, 88

A cleric of the Anglican Church for many years, Canon William Henry Brookfield Scharpe, 88, died Sunday in St. Joseph's Hospital following a short illness.

Funeral services will be held from Christ Church Cathedral Thursday by Most Rev. H. E. Sexton, Archbishop of British Columbia, assisted by the dean, Rt. Rev. P. R. Beattie and Rev. E. J. Hulford of Vancouver. Cremation will follow at Royal Oak Burial Park.

Born on the Jersey Islands, Canon Scharpe was a volunteer during the Boer War and was made a deacon of the church in 1918 at Gordon Indian School in Punnichy, Sask.

He also worked on the Day Star reservation for several years and in 1921 was made treasurer of the diocese of Qu-

Appelle and in 1939 a canon. A member of the Union Club, he was also an honorary staff member at Christ Church Cathedral.

'Brideship' Company Excited

The 16 young ladies who play the parts of brides in the forthcoming production of Mme. W. Lugin Fahey's "The Brideship" are just as comely and nearly as excited as the originals whom they portray.

In a cast of 36, including talented Stanley Martin, W. L. Fahey, Mimi Bavin, Mickey Rogers and Robert Marconi, all stars of amateur musical shows here, the little brides represent the precious freight of the ship Tynemouth which arrived off Victoria in 1862.

Mme. Fahey's opera tells the authentic story of those brides for early settlers, woven about a fictional romantic plot.

Guests at the first performance of the opera at Esquimalt High School's auditorium Nov. 13 and 14, will be twin sisters, Mrs. Harriet Hubbard and Mrs. S. E. Young, direct descendants of one of the Tynemouth's brides.

The Esquimalt Lions Club is sponsoring the show, proceeds of which are entirely devoted to club charities.

Victoria's 100 Polish Families Building Own 'Welcome' Centre

Completion sometime next year of a "Polish Home" is the aim of Victoria's Polish community.

Members of the White Eagle Polish Association have devoted much time and money during the past year toward realization of their goal.

The association owns three lots at the corner of Niagara and Dock Streets, and through contributions and volunteer labor of the membership, a cement foundation and wooden frame have been raised on the site.

At the moment, however, the project is delayed by lack of funds and a public subscription campaign is planned.

HOPES FOR 1954

A. Bednarski, chairman of the White Eagle Association, says with adequate funds and continued help by volunteer labor, the home could be completed by next summer.

He feels the home will meet an important need. It will serve as social and educational centre for all the estimated 100 Polish families here. It is to contain a library, games room, banquet hall and kitchen.

MOSTLY DP's
Eighty per cent of the Poles now living here come to Canada as displaced persons.

"The initiative to build a Polish Home arose amongst the older Polish immigrants as a result of their own experience,"

Mr. Bednarski explains. "Members of the White Eagle Association are endeavoring to build a 'home' for the purpose of helping their fellow countrymen to settle in Canada and find homes, jobs and to help in bringing up their children."

One of the biggest drawbacks for recent Polish immigrants is that few of them have a working knowledge of English. From that operation, the association salvaged lumber, doors, windows, and a quantity of pipe.

Rich and Poor Crawl to Worship In Mexico's Place of Pilgrimage

This is another in a series of articles by Lloyd Baker, Times city editor, on important news and people visited as a member of a newspaper and radio party on the inaugural flight of a C.P.R. non-stop service to Mexico and South America at the beginning of the month.

By LLOYD BAKER
MEXICO CITY—They have a "staff artist" at the world-famous Shrine of Guadalupe where pilgrims meet in teeming throngs the year round. He paints on pieces of tin scenes depicting experiences of the worshippers in which they believe the Virgin of the Shrine has saved their lives. Hundreds of the paintings hang on the walls of a large anteroom of the cathedral, and many tales of horror are told with happy endings. One may show where the Virgin has appeared to save the traveller from two "banditos" pointing guns at his back; or how the passenger thrown under the wheels of a train has been restored to health despite the fact he is all but cut in two; or how the patient's gruesome operation was successful.

Almost every kind of near-tragedy or accident is seen in the child-like paintings.

And great interest is shown in this odd "art gallery" by pilgrim and "tourista" alike. We paid a visit at mid-morning and found the cathedral crowded not only with visitors from far afield, but poverty-stricken peasants and their families from nearby areas.

An indication of their means was the candle they had purchased at the door of the shrine to carry to the altar.

Some were three or more feet in length; others as small as your little finger.

But rich and poor alike were crawling shoulder to shoulder on their knees across the rough rock floor of the cathedral in a singular attitude of humility.

Mass was being celebrated every half hour, and the beauty of the cathedral above the heads of the people was glittering to the eye of the visitor who was urged to wander through the shrine; take photographs and make recordings (the radio men of our party carried tape recorders).

So devout were the pilgrims in their mission that no attention was paid to the popping of flashlight bulbs and the quiet confusion of a party of 14 sightseeing newsmen would make.

We heard the legend of the shrine from the lips of an attendant near an outdoor replica of the altar of the cathedral which had been installed to expedite the movement of pilgrims.

Here the candles were being placed on a covered platform, and the pilgrims were touching the statue of the Virgin, then touching their fingers to their foreheads and other parts of the body.

They were seeking blessing from the Virgin and healing for various sicknesses.

The shrine is supposed to have been built where a young country boy, Juan Diego, saw a vision of the Virgin who told him a church must be built.

John relayed the message to his bishop, so the story goes, who said he must have proof of the vision.

The Virgin returned and told the lad to pick roses from a nearby bush and take them to the bishop. He did so, carrying them in his peasant's apron. And when he dropped the roses at the feet of the bishop, a painting of the Virgin is supposed to have been revealed on the apron.

The shrine was built in 1531 and the Virgin of Guadalupe became Mexico's patron saint.

College Invites All Candidates To Talk Policy

Young Voters Show Election Interest

Victoria College students, many of whom will be voting for the first time in the Nov. 24 Victoria by-election, have invited all candidates to address the student body at noon hour, Wednesday, Nov. 18.

Nineteen and twenty-year-olds now eligible to vote following an amendment to the Elections Act passed at the last session of the Legislature. Previously, the voting age was 21.

"We don't want campaign speeches, but the students would like informative talks from the candidates," a spokesman said. "They want to hear the fundamental differences between the parties and something about the issues."

Meanwhile, party workers are busy arranging public meetings for the candidates.

Liberal candidate George F. Gregory starts his campaign tonight at Sir James Douglas School at 8 p.m. Supporting speaker will be George Wilkinson.

FORMAL APPOINTMENT

F. Morran Waller as assistant city clerk was announced today by City Manager Cecil Wyatt.

Assistant city clerk's job, formerly held by Percy Wright, who left to become an MLA, has been combined with secretary of committees job which Mr. Waller has held for last five years. Mr. Waller began work with the city 15 years ago.

Service stations were entered by breaking glass in doors to release locks. The food shop was entered by climbing onto a bicycle stand and through an upper window that was not properly locked. Time of the break-ins was established at around 2 a.m. as a switch was pulled in the food shop to shut off the electric clock at that time.

3 Fairfield Break-Ins

While three youths await court sentence for a series of break-ins they have admitted, another gang of thieves, also believed to be 'teen-agers, raided three city premises Monday night.

Two service stations and a store at Cook and Fairfield were entered, but nothing was taken. Police assume the thieves are looking for money only.

The Fairfield Service Station, Al Bentley's station across the street and Moore's Food Shop on the southeast corner of Cook and Fairfield were targets.

Service stations were entered by breaking glass in doors to release locks. The food shop was entered by climbing onto a bicycle stand and through an upper window that was not properly locked.

Time of the break-ins was established at around 2 a.m. as a switch was pulled in the food shop to shut off the electric clock at that time.

AWAIT SENTENCE

Three youths now in city and Saanich police courts are awaiting sentence for shopbreakings during the last two weeks.

Donald Gray, 1453 Taunton, in city court Monday pleaded guilty to five break-ins.

Edward Deacon, 17, was transferred from juvenile to senior court in both the city and Saanich today. In city court he pleaded guilty to one break-in and will appear in senior Saanich court Thursday afternoon on two charges.

Ronald Morry, 17, transferred from juvenile court to senior court, pleaded guilty to two break-ins. Morry and Deacon were remanded in city court to Friday for sentence.

Bennett Gives Figures to Prove Debt Pyramid

Premier W. A. C. Bennett, clarifying his debt reduction figures, said today B.C.'s net debt in 1947 was $19,324,008. In 1952, he said, then Premier Byron Johnson reported the net debt was $191,091,830.

The premier was supporting his charge that the Johnson administration pyramided the province's debt.

Child's Death Lights Indians' Grave Plight

Conditions of West Saanich Band Deplored; Housing Held First Need

By DON INGHAM

The public spotlight was thrown today on conditions at the West Saanich Indian Reservation following the death of a three-year-old Indian girl, Delores Henry, whose parents, Mr. and Mrs. Hubert Henry, are members of the T'sartlip Indian Band.

The little girl died at Rest Haven Hospital Friday after a life blighted constantly by disease.

Immediate cause of death was spinal meningitis, but her life was a record of one cold after another, pneumonia, and finally an attack of diarrhoea that is afflicting many residents of the reserve.

Conditions leading to the little girl's death were described as poverty, inadequate housing, exposure to heat and cold in miserable shacks, and poor food.

Said Chief Baptiste Paul of the residents:

"Any home improvements other than the bare necessities have to come from their own meagre earnings. Even the paint for the outside of a house is not supplied."

"Their housing is bad, their diet is bad, and their economic status is bad," said Dr. Walter H. Roberts, resident physician at Rest Haven.

HOUSING FIRST NEED

"If anyone is going to do anything to help them, the first thing they should do is to supply them with more houses. There are some things they can do to help themselves, but they are at a terrible disadvantage at the present time."

He said "a lot of damage" was done when Indians were allowed in beer parlors.

Pinpointing the blame for conditions is difficult. The Indian affairs department is limited by rules and regulation, and relies considerably on the initiative of the individual Indian to help himself. Department officials, however, refused to comment on the situation.

Indians work when they can, but white residents of the area tell stories of Indians who have "held down" jobs successfully and yet have been fired because of their race.

Others approached today have taken the opposite view—that the Indians could do a lot more to help themselves and are largely to blame for conditions.

PAST ERRORS BLAMED

A highly qualified observer who would not permit use of his name blamed the situation, which is not new, on the mistakes and intolerances of the past.

"The federal government is not responsible for their support," he said. "If the Indians want a living they are expected to earn it. They are not wanted in public schools, therefore cannot get a thorough education. Without an education they cannot earn a living, and continue in the same rut. It's a vicious circle."

"I see no great change for a generation," he said. The education situation is improving and educated children will make better parents. Right now they are bound by old ways and old prejudices on both sides. The federal government, I understand, is ready and willing to assist them if they are not employable, but a lot is left to the individual."

—C.W.

ASK The TIMES

Q.—What are the names of the president and directors of the PGE Railway? What salary does each receive, if any?—J.B.

A.—Directors of the PGE don't get paid. They are Premier W. A. C. Bennett, president; Finance Minister Einar Gunderson, vice-president, and Bernard Allen, a former CNR official.

Q.—A short time ago the "Ask the Times" column told of the distribution of bald eagles along the B.C. coast and among the islands. Are there any golden eagles in this province, and where are they to be found?—C.W.

A.—Golden eagles are found chiefly in the mountainous interior of the B.C. mainland, though there have been reports of specimens being seen over this island, and it is thought there may be small numbers of these great hunters in the hilly centre of the island. Like the bald eagle, they are not protected by law. Ornithologists agree they are less numerous than the bald species.

Q.—Art Stott has referred more than once in his column to Cigarmakers' Bay. Can you tell me where it is?—E.R.

A.—South of Chilsid on Shawanigan Lake. It derived its name from the old Victoria cigar makers, who held their picnics and outings there.

Anyone wishing a question answered is invited to send the problem along to The Times, addressed to "Ask the Times" Editor. Questions and answers will be published daily. All questions should deal with matters of fact and be of general interest.

Aldermanic Fire Can't Heat Mayor On Civic Employees' Salary Issue

Mayor Claude Harrison was unperturbed today by a charge of "inconsistency" leveled against him Monday by Ald. Donald Smith, one of four candidates running against him for the mayoralty in December.

Ald. Smith criticized the mayor for stating his opposition to any general wage increase for City Hall staff this year, when only recently he voted in favor of a $2,000-a-year raise for City Manager Cecil Wyatt.

The mayor said Ald. Smith's statement had been designed "to scrounge votes."

The mayor said he felt it almost unworthy of reply.

"I don't intend to become involved in a silly dispute designed to catch votes," the mayor said.

The manager was given a raise, the mayor went on, "because he's saved the city a great deal of money and is going to save the city a lot more."

"It was just good business to give him an increase," the mayor asserted.

Ald. Waldo Skillings and Ald. Percy Scourrah, two other mayoralty candidates subject to criticism from Ald. Smith for having supported the wage increase to the city manager, also were untroubled.

Ald. Skillings said Ald. Smith was "inexperienced."

"As far as I'm concerned," Ald. Skillings said, "each problem is settled on its merits."

In the case of the manager's wage increase, Ald. Skillings said he supported the increase because he was convinced the raise was justified.

At the same time, Ald. Skillings said he felt Mayor Harrison should have withheld comment on the civic staff wage question until such time as the employees put forward their requests and their reasons.

CHANCE APPRECIATED

Ald. Percy Scourrah said he appreciated Ald. Smith's remarks as it gave him a chance to explain why the manager's wage increase was favored by a 7 to 3 vote of the council.

"I have no apologies to make for voting as I did," Ald. Scourrah said. "To me, it is only commonsense and good business to recognize ability and efficiency wherever found."

"When the city manager was engaged it was understood by the council of the day his contract would be reviewed before its expiry, and I personally felt that we were honor bound to do so.

"Furthermore, there are many more city manager positions than there are competent and experienced managers and I felt we must grant the raise in order to hold a man who had justified our judgment when we engaged him."

"Proof that he is worth the increase lies in the fact that due to his reorganization of the inside staff, the city is saving $30,000 per year in salaries."

"The work of the City Hall is now being done by fewer employees and more efficiently than before he came."

Ald. Scourrah felt that without savings effected by the manager, the current mill rate would have been two or three mills higher.

FURTIVE DRINKING STILL WORRIES CHURCH

Liquor Laws No Cure, Archbishop Holds

"Furtive drinking, common to hotel rooms and elsewhere" will not likely be lessened by imposition of the B.C. government's 10 per cent tax on liquor sold in clubs and cocktail bars.

Archbishop H. E. Sexton told parishioners in a newsletter in the October-November "Challenge," that opinion is held by many "well-informed observers."

The criticism was concealed in a carefully worded paragraph concerning the last session of the B.C. Legislature.

"It is to be hoped that at least some of the measures adopted may be in the best interests of the people," he stated, "especially the changes in the Liquor Act."

He said there is a difference of opinion as to the best means of promotion for temperance.

"Many of us... will be in accord with the Stevens Commission."

"Many well-informed observers, however, are doubtful as to the government's wisdom in imposing an additional 10 per cent tax, which, it is feared, amongst other objections, will be detrimental in lessening the furtive drinking common to hotel bedrooms and elsewhere and which has been one of the worst features in liquor consumption."

Mrs. Florence Haigh, 1586 Rockland Avenue, was fined $15 in city police court today. Fine was imposed by Magistrate H. C. Hall on a charge of obstructing an officer of the building department.

Old friends on opposite sides of the globe have been reunited after many years by Victoria Chamber of Commerce. Mrs. Elizabeth G. Frye, Bristol, Eng., sought the chamber's aid in finding Mrs. Blanche Lee, an old friend of her mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Davies, also of Bristol.

A flurry of phone calls and inquiries located Mrs. Lee at 1177 Esquimalt Road. "Just another Chamber of Commerce service," said managing-secretary George I. Warren as he dictated a letter telling the Englishwoman her old friend's address.

Regular meeting of Victoria Inboard-Outboard Association will be held Wednesday at 8 p.m. in the Williams Building, 749 Broughton Street.

A public hearing will be held at Esquimalt Municipal Hall, Friday at 7 p.m., concerning a plan to rezone land adjoining the Weston bakery on Fairview. British American Paint Company has offered Esquimalt $4,300 for a site for a warehouse but the land is presently zoned for residences. Council will rezone the area to industrial if no public objection is raised.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER.

Miss Brent swept into the classroom, with a cheerful "Good morning" to the children, and placed a little box on her table. There was nothing very unusual about the box itself: it was just a regular cardboard container, about six inches high, in fact measuring the same in all three directions... a perfect cube. But their teacher's general bearing was unusual, for she was normally shy and morose. "Now, children," she announced to her surprised little audience, "It's my birthday, and I've got some candy for you." She opened the box, and showed them that it was filled to the top with luscious-looking chocolate fudge. Taking one out, she told the children to come up for their gift. Each child was given the same number of the rich brown cubes, and Miss Brent was left with a few which she ate herself: being fewer than seven these could not be shared out. I forgot to mention that there were only seven children in that class, but can you figure out how many candies Miss Brent ate?

Harknett-Hearn Ceremony
In Douglas St. Baptist

Pastel chrysanthemums decorated Douglas Street Baptist Church, Saturday evening, for the ceremony which united in marriage Beverly Grace Hearn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George R. Hearn, 1661 McTear Avenue, with Vernon Alexander Drake, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Harknett, 526 Esquimalt Road. Rev. Ernest King officiated.

During signing of the register, the bride's aunt, Miss N. Jenner, sang "Thy Will for Them," which had been composed by the bride's late grandfather, G. A. Hearn.

Coming up the aisle on her father's arm, the charming bride wore a floor-length, strapless gown of nylon net over crisp taffeta, the bouffant skirt featuring a deep flounce of chantilly lace. Her matching jacket had an Elizabethan collar and lily point sleeves and her fingertip veil of nylon net cascaded from a pearl and rhinestone tiara. She carried a shower bouquet of red roses and feathered white carnations.

As maid of honor for her sister, Miss Vera Hearn chose a floor-length gown of pale yellow net over taffeta with brocade jacket. Similar gowns in pale pink and pale blue, respectively, were worn by Mrs. Shirley Swan, bridesmaid, and Miss Roberta Hearn, sister of the bride, bridesmaid. All the atendants had net headresses and elbow-length net mitts to match their gowns and carried bouquets of pastel chrysanthemums.

Alec Park was best man, and ushers Russell Hearn, brother of the bride, and Wes Swan.

A reception followed at the Business and Professional Women's Club room. The three-tier wedding cake, topped with a silver vase of pale pink sweetheart roses and fern, was placed in a setting of pink tulle and white candles in crystal holders. W. Farmer proposed the toast.

After a honeymoon in Portland, Mr. and Mrs. Harknett will make their home on Durand Road, Royal Oak. The bride chose as her going-away costume a lilac-toned suit with grey topcoat and navy blue accessories. She had a corsage of gardenias and feathered white carnations.

WHY GROW OLD?

Mother, Daughter, Exercise
Promotes Fun and Health

Today I am giving you an exercise which will benefit both mother and daughter. This is a part of the series I am now writing about the family exercise plan.

If mother is an average woman she probably wishes to reduce her abdomen. If she is one of the unusuals and does not have a bulge at this point she will still profit by toning the abdominal muscles because a strong natural girdle is most important to a woman from the viewpoint of both beauty and health.

The same thing goes for her daughter. The daughter may be at that early teenage, chubby stage where her waist and tummy are thick. Nature will slim her down, given a little time, but it will be good preventive medicine to increase the tone of the abdominal muscles.

In later teenage we often see very young women whose figures are ruined by a bulge at the abdomen.

The exercise I am giving today is for the mother and daughter to do together. They sit facing one another. Each partner wraps her toes about the ankles of the other partner. The knees should be well bent. Keep the legs in this position and lie down on the floor with the arms resting on the floor, overhead. Lift the trunk and clap hands. The right hand of the mother hits the left hand of the daughter while her left hand hits her daughter's right hand. Both lower their trunks to the floor, arms overhead. The legs and feet remain in the same position throughout this exercise. Continue raising trunk and clapping hands, and lowering trunk to the floor, arms overhead.

This is a splendid abdominal exercise and as you can see will be fun for the mother and daughter to do together.

If you would like to have my leaflet "Family Exercise Plan," in order to imbue your family with an increase in health and good looks, and also establish another of those family projects, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for leaflet No. 35. Address Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Father Refuses to Allow Daughter, 23, to Marry

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

Parents are legally responsible for their children until they come of age. Then the young person becomes his own master. That is why the daughter of the woman who wrote the following letter is not bound to obey her father's wishes.

(Q)—"I have a daughter 23. Her father still thinks of her as a child and seems to want her to be a child. He does not want to give her the rights of a normal girl of her age. Several years ago she was engaged to a very nice young man. When they wanted to get married, he refused to give his consent and even threatened the young man. Now my daughter is going with another nice young man. Her father says he doesn't care how old she is, she isn't going to do what she wants. My daughter is very disgusted and wants to leave home, but he has threatened her. I should like to have your opinion."

(A)—My opinion is that your daughter should carry out her wish and leave home. She is not being fair to herself in tolerating her father's treatment of her.

When she was engaged before, her father may have thought she was too young to know her own mind and that she was too young to assume the responsibilities of marriage. That argument certainly does not hold now. She is a grown woman and should be permitted to make decisions for herself.

So long as you think this young man is suitable and would make her happy, it is unfair to allow her father to break up her romance and ruin her chances for a happy married life. Your husband may feel that he can control his daughter's life as he did when she was a minor. Now she is legally of age. He has no more right to threaten her than he has to threaten anyone else.

Pictures Given To Hospital

Plans to suitably frame 35 scenes of British Columbia and Victoria, which were presented by a local artist to Veterans' Hospital for wards and rooms, were made at meeting of the Women's Auxiliary.

Mrs. Aubrey Kent presided and it was also reported that an auxiliary member had donated a large picture for use in a pavilion sunroom. Final arrangements were made for a bingo party convenered by Mrs. C. B. Mess and Mrs. A. Blyth. S. H. Okell attended the meeting and introduced his successor, J. S. Adams.

Never sit with your feet several inches apart and placed evenly in front of you. Instead, place them at angles to achieve a graceful effect. Practice in front of a mirror.

Between Ourselves

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Akira Otsu is a young surgeon at Kyoto University Hospital in Japan. He attended college four years and did research (no internship) for three and half years before he received his medical degree. Then he did five more years research. This summer he received his jgaku-hakase graduate degree.

A western medical man in Japan told me there is no equivalent in our country to the jgaku-hakase. He thinks it would be somewhere between a BA and an MA degree.

Bessie

until the occupation. And, grown-up by then, did not find it so easy.

I met him every day for a week, in his mother-in-law's home in Kyoto when I was staying there. We sat beside each other at meals. He always talked to me through an interpreter. It was only on the last day of my visit that he attempted... with a great struggle... to speak English.

He works in that part of the Kyoto University Hospital specializing in brain surgery. There are 1,000 beds. It's run something like a clinic I would think from his description, five surgeons directors (he is one of the five), with 40 young doctors under them.

No New Equipment in Japanese Hospital

They operate two days a week, Tuesday and Friday, commencing at 1 p.m. On the day before, directors check patients to be operated on and warn them to be ready.

On busy days Akira San told me they will do 10 or 12 operations. One doctor may do two or three. And while they specialize in brain surgery they also do routine surgical work, too, such as appendix and stomach cancers. Because the hospital is short staffed they are called in on accident cases, too, and to set broken bones.

This young surgeon shakes his head sadly when you ask him about equipment at his hospital. It is old, he tells you, and there is not enough money to buy new—because the hospital is NOT run on a profit. It is supported by government funds.

A certain amount of the money comes through three forms of hospital insurance. Akira San told me. In one, the patient pays the hospital; a second includes group insurance among business firms and also among families and the third is that in which the city of Kyoto pays for the very poor "who have no money." There is a fourth form of insurance in which the university pays for brilliant students going in for research of various kinds.

Deficit for actual working expenses is made up by the government.

Young Surgeon Has Three Patients

Akira San proudly told me he has three patients of his own in the hospital at present and that he also has 10 or 12 out patients. But he examines and cares for 30 to 50 more during a day. And the special treatments he gives average 150 or more in 10 days.

He leaves home every morning around 8 o'clock, carrying his lunch in a furoshiki (the colorful kerchief all Japanese use to carry bundles). He rides a bicycle the 50 or more blocks to the hospital and home again at night.

There is a doctors' luncheon he told me and the nurses make the tea.

Akira San's hours are from 8.30 to 5.30. He had no salary while studying and received it only after he had completed his graduate work. He now gets a basic salary of 14,000 yen (about $42) plus 600 yen for his wife (about $1.50) and 3,000 yen for living in a city (about $9). And perhaps two to three thousand yen for overtime (about $9). From this, tax is deducted, so that the young surgeon's take-home pay is a little less than 20,000 yen a month (about $60).

This is standard and set by the government... and of course, he is a government employee.

Akira San and his wife live in her mother's home. They have one large room. And this cuts down on living expenses. This young surgeon has a dream. First, to see modern equipment in his hospital... and second to come to America for a year... to study brain surgery. Then to go back to Japan to help his own people!

if it's kroy wool it won't shrink!

This sweater won't shrink—it's made of Kroy wool. Even after it has been washed again and again, it will still retain its original woolly softness and knitted size. No stretchers are needed in drying. Socks, underwear, sportshirts and baby clothes, too, won't shrink when they're made of Kroy wool. So look for the Kroy name whenever you shop for wool or woolens.

Newlyweds Will Visit Niagara Falls And New York; Married on Saturday

Niagara Falls and New York will be visited by Mr. and Mrs. George J. Elliot, who are now on honeymoon following their wedding, Saturday evening, in First United Church.

For the ceremony, the bride, formerly Grace Muriel McDonald, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. John McDonald, Napinka, Man., wore an exquisite gown of white Chantilly lace over heavy blue satin. Gown was styled with a Queen Anne collar and lily pointed sleeves. A pearl-trimmed headpiece held her chapel veil and she carried a bouquet of red roses and white carnations. She wore a single strand of pearls and the groom's gift, a wrist watch of gold and diamonds.

Rev. Moir A. J. Waters performed the ceremony. The church was decorated in chrysanthemums in tones to correspond with the bridesmaids' dresses.

Mrs. Ruth Champion sang "O Promise Me" during signing of the register. Organist was Mrs. J. Roberto Wood. George Angus gave the bride in marriage. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George Elliot, 1680 Earlston Street.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Eileen Gieskew, who wore a gown of green taffeta. Bridesmaid, Miss Gladys Roshek, and bridesmatron, Mrs. Fay Sage, wore taffeta gowns in orchid and yellow, respectively. Miss Frances Ranson, flower girl, wore a frock of pink net over taffeta. She carried a basket of roses and chrysanthemums. Other attendants carried bouquets of pink, green and yellow carnations.

Maurice White was best man and ushers were Dale Huck and Ken Stevenson.

Guests gathered at Olde England Inn for the reception. A lace cloth, handmade by the groom's aunt, Mrs. May Ranson, covered the bride's table, which was centred with a four-tier wedding cake. Silver candelabra flanked the cake. Tom Hale proposed a toast to the bride.

Mrs. F. McDonald, Vancouver, and the groom's mother received guests. Mrs. McDonald wore a dress of navy net over satin in semi-formal length with corsage of talisman roses. Mrs. Elliot wore a crepe and lace dress in shades of roses tone with corsage of American Beauty roses.

Noted Beauty Authority Advises

"Don't Fool With Pimples"

MARCELLA HOLMES
(Former Beauty Editor of "Glamour" Magazine)

"As a beauty editor many people have asked me, 'what should I do for pimples?' I always say, don't try just anything on them! Acne-type pimples are a serious condition that if neglected can permanently mar your looks. So use a medication specifically developed for pimples, and not multi-purpose skin creams or ointments that are claimed to be 'also good for pimples'."

"You see, general purpose creams and ointments do not provide in a fast-drying greaseless base the special medical ingredients so necessary in the treatment of pimples. But fortunately, today, there's a scientific medicated formulation developed especially to clear pimples, that has proven its effectiveness in actual use by thousands in Canada and the U.S. It is called CLEARASIL."

New-Type Greaseless "Base"

"The special medications in the CLEARASIL formula are contained in a new-type oil-free 'base'. This new 'base' material is not only greaseless but is also oil-absorbing, actually helps remove excess oil from skin that authorities agree is a major factor in acne. In fact, CLEARASIL has such remarkable drying action that it clears and dries pimples surprisingly fast.

Skin-Colored—Hides Pimples

"This new CLEARASIL medication is skin-colored to hide pimples while it works, and to end the embarrassment of pimples instantly. So again I advise, don't fool with pimples. General purpose creams and ointments have their proper uses, but don't depend on them for treatment of pimples. Treat this specific condition with a special pimple medication."

Reader's Digest reported on clinical tests using CLEARASIL type medication. CLEARASIL has helped so many boys, girls and adults that it is now the largest-selling special pimple medication in America. It must work for you or money back. Only 69¢. Large economy size $1.19. At all drug stores. Get CLEARASIL today.

SOUTHAMPTON, Eng. (UP)—Randy Turpin, British middle-weight champion who lost a bid for the world crown against Carl (Bobo) Olsen of San Francisco Oct. 22, today said he was "staggered" at the news that he had been suspended by the New York Boxing Commission.

The middleweight said he had not been officially informed of the commission's action, adding "But rest assured I shall, if I can, appeal and fight in every possible way."

The New York commission revealed Monday that it had suspended Turpin Nov. 2 for "actions detrimental to the best interests of boxing."

English Soccer Team Walks Off Field

NORTHWICH, Eng. (AP)—A disputed goal in a soccer match Saturday gave British football officialdom a problem unique in its history.

The Runcom team walked off the field after insisting a Wilton Albion shot had entered the goal through the net and not fairly. The referee had given his ruling that the goal was good.

The British rules make no provision for forfeits when a team refuses to finish a game—nothing like that ever happened before. The only regulation that could possibly apply calls for a replay if a game is not completed.

Wilton Albion, which felt it was leading 3-1 at the time, might not like the idea of starting all over again.

TORONTO (CP)—Maple-Leaf Gardens Limited showed an increase of $6,233 in its net profit for the year ending Aug. 31, President Conn Smythe announced during the week-end.

Parker New Fistic Hope?

NEW YORK (BUP)—Lanky James J. Parker of Barrie, Ont., bid today for recognition in the heavyweight ranks on the strength of eight victories in as many bouts this year.

Parker rang up win No. 8 Monday night at the expense of heavy but somewhat blubbery Edgardo Jose Romero of Argentina in the 10-round feature bout at Brooklyn's Eastern Parkway Arena. The victory was by a unanimous decision, but Parker has knocked out six rivals this year.

People who appreciate fine cars are turning to Monarch

"... everything you could ask for in a really fine car..."

My friend the Judge is used to making decisions on the basis of evidence. He told me he'd bought a Monarch because all the evidence pointed to its being the very best buy in its field. Now that I'm driving a Monarch I can appreciate his good judgment. Monarch has everything you could ask for in a really fine car... a 125-Hp. V-8 engine that's as dependable as it is powerful... riding quality that's completely satisfying in every way... and the kind of beauty admired by people who know truly good design when they see it. By the way, I'm glad I invested a little extra and got all Monarch's wonderful power features. It's a great experience to drive with absolutely no effort, yet to know that you have perfect control of your car wherever you go.

This could be your experience, too... see your Monarch dealer soon.

HOME GARDEN

By HILDA BEASTALL

There are many hobby greenhouses in the Greater Victoria area. Their number has doubled in the last two years. Since I spend at least half my time in our own greenhouse, it saddens me to see a great many of these fine little structures standing empty for much of the year. Apparently less than half are supplied with any method of heating, yet there are hundreds of beautiful and interesting subjects which require no winter heat. Shelter from the severest of the elements such as a greenhouse supplies, will be well repaid in earlier and more perfect blooms than may be obtained outdoors during February and early March.

A few of the early flowering rock garden plants may be started now by the beginner. Purchased in pots, there will be no hazard of rooting. Some of these are: Anemone blanda, and A. hepatica; cyclamen coum and early flowering primula; the following "small" bulbs, which will, of course, need to be rooted in the same manner as for those potted for house decoration: Chionodoxa lucillae; the early flowering spring Crocus in various colors; the winter flowering dwarf iris; muscari, both blue and white varieties; the dwarf and very early narcissi; some of the exquisite tulip species, and snowdrops.

Instead of the conventional tall flower pot, a lower type known as a bulb pan is used. Since perfect drainage is required, this may be achieved with the ordinary tall pot by half filling it with broken crockery or small and large stones before adding the soil in which the bulbs or plants are placed. The height of the subjects mentioned in the above list will range from four to eight inches, and will appear to better advantage if grown in lower pots.

In the case of the bulbous plants, a dozen to a seven-inch will give a fascinating group in flower. All the above should have bloomed by about March 15, and may be moved to a sheltered cold frame for the remainder of the season.

City's Fire Hose Couplings To Conform to New Standard

The provincial fire marshal's office is prepared to make an early start on converting couplings used by Victoria's fire department to conform to a new standard size throughout B.C. The plan will enable one department to help another in case of a major conflagration. Victoria Fire Chief Frank Briers today described the step as "very necessary" and long delayed. Standardization has come about now because of civil defense needs. W. A. Walker, fire marshal, estimates 75 per cent of the fire equipment in B.C. is already of the standard specified. Work of conversion is being undertaken first on Vancouver Island and the West Kootenay district. Cost of conversion is being borne two-thirds by the provincial government and one-third by the federal government. Victoria will pay nothing. Arts Centre Books Show for Sculptors Sculpture, graphics and poetry will be featured in a special non-jury show at Greater Victoria Arts Centre between Dec. 8 and Jan. 3. The show will be open to Island exhibitors. Entry forms are available at the Arts Centre. MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Alouettes have announced that tackle Tex Coulter and centre Tom Hugo have been nominated by the Montreal Big Four team for the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy.

Island Film Body Reorganizes, Changes Name

A full-scale discussion, marked by a heated exchange between Nanaimo and Victoria members, resulted in reorganization Sunday at Vancouver of the Vancouver Island Regional Film Council. Delegates voted to change the name of the organization to the Vancouver Island Regional Film Association and named a 10-member committee to hold office until the next annual meeting of the association in October, 1954.

During the heated discussion Nanaimo members charged that council chairman Frank E. Marshall, president of the Victoria group, was attempting to "railroad" unconstitutional procedures through. Named to the committee were Mr. Marshall and Mrs. P. Whitaker, Victoria; Miss Ena Young, and E. G. Hokanson, Nanaimo; John H. Smythe and A. K. Taylor, Port Alberni; H. Jones and Al Johnson, Courtenay; Robert McKinney and G. Armand, Cowichan Valley.

Highway Board Urged Free From Politics

Establishment of a non-political provincial highway commission today was recommended by Hugh A. Martin of Vancouver, president of the Road Builders and Heavy Construction Association.

Mr. Martin said B.C. has the physical and economic resources to be building twice the mileage of highways it is now. "Administration of this highly important business should be in the hands of individuals who are not in any way called upon to adjust their thinking to the vagaries of backwoods politics," the president said.

He said the present method of expending moneys on highways and bridges is not conducive to a logical development of the highway system "and does not contribute to a healthy, strong construction industry."

WIDE POWER NEEDED
The highway commission, Mr. Martin said, should have power to control all highway planning, the awarding of contracts and their administration.

This is the only way in which some "equilibrium" can be restored, he stated.

Mr. Martin noted Premier W. A. C. Bennett has said highway contracts are being awarded at lower prices now than under the previous government's regime. Mr. Martin said he is commenting on the premier's statement "with no sense of political partisanship but merely to set the record straight on a matter which might be badly misconstrued with unfair and unjust implications."

Explaining the reason for the lower bids, Mr. Martin quoted the Engineering News Record, a top construction journal: "Heavy construction contractors today can handle 50 per cent more work than in 1949... though volume of work is at an all-time high, it gained only 38 per cent in the three-year period."

"So it is no wonder contractors are bidding for jobs with an aggressiveness not experienced in 20 years or more. A majority of the 600 contractors responding to ENR's capacity check-up see this intense competition lasting another year or two, and resulting in a separation of the men from the boys." The prevalence of unsound bidding, the ENR said, is bound to cause a number of weaker, marginal operators to drop out. "In an attempt to hang on, some of these firms are bidding jobs at very little or no profit."

HARRY TRUMAN

ORDERED BEFORE COMMITTEE

Truman, Byrnes Get Subpoenas

WASHINGTON (AP)—A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee said today it has issued a subpoena for the appearance of former president Truman Thursday for questioning in the Harry Dexter White case.

NO TIMES TOMORROW

Remembrance Day holiday will be observed by staff members of the Victoria Times and no editions of the paper will be published tomorrow.

Next regular editions of The Times will appear on Thursday.

Dull Weather Forecast Here For Holiday

Most of Greater Victoria will enjoy a holiday Wednesday to observe Remembrance Day in honor of Canadians who lost their lives in two world wars.

Stores and factories will be closed, as will nearly all provincial and federal government offices.

The post office will make no deliveries, but will observe the Sunday schedule for collections.

B.C. Electric buses will adopt the regular holiday schedule used on other holidays this year with the exception of a general halt, sharp at 11 a.m., for the traditional two minutes' silence in tribute to the war dead.

Places of entertainment, however, will be open. Motion picture houses will observe their regular hours and Totem Theatre will stage its evening performance. Beer parlors and restaurants will be open.

The weather will not be particularly good for veterans and other groups taking part in cenotaph services. Weatherman William Mackie predicted cloudy skies and a few showers overnight and Wednesday, with winds of 15 miles. Temperatures, though, will be in the mild range between 48 and 55 degrees.

Transportation companies expect no great increase in travel on the mid-week holiday.

Boxer Dies on Gallows, Buried in Pauper's Grave

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charles Matthews, young boxer who fought under the name of Sonny Jones and killed to the rhythm of a jazz beat, was hanged at four minutes past midnight today in Oakalla Prison Farm.

Matthews, 21, was executed for the hammer-slaying last March of his manager's sister, Mrs. Los Angeles Smith, whom he accused of breaking up his romance with a young girl, Peggy Bowen.

At the same time, a 23-year-old woman who lived with the Smiths, Mrs. Jocelyn Wallberg, was severely beaten while Matthews played the record "Charlie Was a Boxer," on the phone graph.

Twelve minutes after the trap was sprung, the New York Negro was pronounced dead. His body was taken to a pauper's grave. There were no mourners. His body was not claimed.

Matthews' last request came Sunday, when he asked to be allowed to listen to a radio. It was placed in the death-row corridor, outside the gate to his cell.

He had attempted suicide four times since his arrest and was under constant surveillance. A request was relayed for him to a radio station and, guards said, he cried while a popular singer sang.

The hanging took three minutes and 30 seconds. One of the last sounds the tall athlete heard was a shouted goodbye from fellow-prisoners when he started the short walk to the gallows in a converted elevator shaft.

The prison was silent as Rev. Albert Riesby of the Standard American Church prayed with the condemned man kneeling in front of the rope.

Coward Admits Big Sweepstake Operation Here

Pleads Guilty As Charged

A key man here in what is purported to be one of the biggest sweepstake rings in Canada pleaded guilty in city police court today to a charge of unlawfully conducting a lottery.

He is George Herbert Coward, 50, of 929 North Park. He was apprehended by two Saanich police officers at 3 a.m. Monday while driving a car along Quadra near Tattersal.

In the rear compartment of the car they found a large amount of sweepstake material and more after raiding his North Park Street home.

Coward originally appeared before Magistrate H. C. Hall in Saanich police court Monday morning charged with the same offense.

CITY JURISDICTION

At a special session of the Saanich court today, however, the charge with withdrawn after Prosecutor Lloyd G. McKenzie had pointed out to the magistrate that the case came under the jurisdiction of the City of Victoria.

A few minutes later Coward admitted his guilt before the same magistrate in city court. Magistrate Hall remanded him to Thursday to hear circumstances involved. Sentence will follow.

Saanich police intimated that Coward was apparently the local end of a giant Canadian-wide sweepstake syndicate.

While sitting through his possessions police found a list that gave the names and addresses of important men in the syndicate.

However, detectives doubt if they will be able to "catch up" with the others involved.

Coward has been behind bars since he was arrested at 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

ARREST CREDIT

Constable Robin Stewart is credited for the arrest. He was in a prowl car with Constable George Walton and became suspicious of a car proceeding very slowly on Quadra at Tattersal. Suspecting the presence of liquor, he stopped the vehicle.

On opening the rear trunk officers found a box crammed with lottery books and other paraphernalia dealing with sweepstakes, including receipts, money and lists of buyers.

At the Coward home they found more sweepstakes material.

"From our perusal of the material, the indication is that the Coward case was part of a large Canadian system dealing with national and international sweepstakes," a Saanich police official said. Books included the Australian and the famous Irish Hospitals' Sweepstake. Some of the tickets dated back to 1945.

Also found in the car were other printed material and cans containing film which the RCMP Criminal Investigation Bureau is investigating.

Tri-Country Talks Start on Balkan Peace

BELGRADE (Reuters) — Talks aimed at securing peace in the Balkans began today between the Greek, Turkish and Yugoslav general staffs.

Thimayya Warns He Is Ready To Interview PWs Himself

PANMUNJOM, Korea (UP)—Indian Lt. Gen. K. S. Thimayya, chairman of the neutral nations repatriation commission, warned the Communists that if they do not agree to his terms as regards the questioning, he may set up the interviews himself.

"I would just allow everybody to walk through the explanation text and put in his application to an Indian officer," Thimayya said.

This would mean that each of the approximately 20,000 anti-Red prisoners could simply state whether he wanted to go home or to remain for good outside China or North Korea.

United States officers are free to question the 22 American prisoners who have refused to go home despite a deadlock which has interrupted the interviewing of anti-Red prisoners by the Communists, it was announced today.

Thimayya made it plain that the deadlock in questioning the anti-Communist prisoners has nothing to do with the interviewing of the Americans who have refused to go home.

But so far the United States command has given no indication that it is ready to try to win back the allegiance of the

WIL Baseball Clubs May Collect Gates From Home Games

Victoria's frequently financially embarrassed Tynes, one of the best home-crowd-drawing teams of the Western International Baseball League, may set its own admission prices and keep its own ball park proceeds next year.

This was the gist of a resolution adopted by WIL executives in session at the Empress Hotel today.

Last season clubs operated on a 60-40 split of receipts, the lesser sum for the visiting team. The home proceeds rule would apply to all member-teams.

However, there's still a catch in it. Bruce Williams of Salem reserved the right to reopen the matter at the league's January meeting. There the resolution might be rescinded.

The executive reduced the player limit of all teams from 18 to 16, including playing managers.

Salem's Bruce Williams was elected first vice-president of the league today, following election of Robert Abel of Tacoma as president Monday. Jim McMonigle of Lewiston, Idaho, is second vice-president, and G. F. Abel, brother of Robert Abel, is secretary. He's also from Tacoma.

Big Three

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

PRESIDENT EISENHOWER

PREMIER LANIEL

Churchill, Eisenhower Laniel to Attend Talk

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced today he will meet with President Eisenhower and French Premier Joseph Laniel in Bermuda Dec. 4 to 8.

Churchill issued a statement at No. 10 Downing Street, his official residence.

The Big Three Allied leaders are to review the entire range of international issues in their conference, it was made known.

An authoritative source said Churchill also will make one more effort to convince Mr. Eisenhower that Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov should be invited to a "last chance" Big Four meeting.

Churchill's announcement of his proposed meeting with President Eisenhower and Laniel said: "It has been decided to hold the three-power conference at Bermuda which was planned for the beginning of July but had to be put off (due to Churchill's illness)."

"President Eisenhower and Mr. (John Foster) Dulles will represent the United States, M. Laniel and (French Foreign Minister Georges) Bidault France and Sir Winston Churchill and (British Foreign Secretary Anthony) Eden Britain.

Still Wants Big Four Parley

"It is hoped to meet from Dec. 4 to Dec. 8 and various matters of common concern to the three powers will be discussed."

If Churchill fails to convince President Eisenhower at the Bermuda meeting that there ought to be a top-level Big Four conference, he will drop that project for the present, the authoritative informant said.

Churchill's recent speeches have shown less enthusiasm for such a Big Four talk.

The chief purpose of the Bermuda meeting, it was understood, will be to survey the position of the Western Allies now that Russia has refused to hold talks at the foreign ministers level to ease world tension, and apparently gone back to the "cold" policy of the late Joseph Stalin.

The invitation for the new Bermuda meeting was said to have come from Churchill about two weeks ago.

Russia's rejection of the west's invitation for a four power ministers' conference in Lugano speeded the decision for the three-power talks, London and Washington sources said.

Churchill wants to discuss personally with Eisenhower and Laniel what steps the west is to take in the immediate future to resolve the deadlock in east-west relations.

The Soviet refusal to the foreign ministers' meeting on Germany and Austria was a bitter disappointment for Churchill, the source said.

Failure to get the Russians to some sort of conference will mean that the West must settle down to a long cold war in what Churchill calls this "terrible and 'cataclysmic' 20th century, the sources said.

The future of Germany will be high on the agenda of the Bermuda talks, the source said.

Churchill at the Bermuda meeting also may try to persuade Mr. Eisenhower to drop American opposition to the participation of Asian neutrals, such as India, in the Korean peace conference.

The Far East is the area where British and American foreign policy is most at loggerheads.

Churchill Tells Trieste Disputants To Be Cautious

LONDON (CP)—Prime Minister Churchill, soon to meet with President Eisenhower and French Premier Joseph Laniel in a Big Three meeting, has warned both opposing sides in the Trieste dispute to be cautious in the quarrel over the disputed territory.

In a general review of foreign affairs to the Lord Mayor's banquet Monday night, Churchill advised extremists on both the Italian and Yugoslav sides to "keep quiet" and "behave" during the tense situation brought on by the British-American decision to withdraw their troops from the occupied territorial zone.

The decision resulted in troop movements by both Italy and Yugoslavia, and deadly violence last week in the city of Trieste itself. Churchill referred to "mobs, either Fascist or Communist," as behind the trouble.

Generally, the prime minister's speech to the banquet called for "time and patience and goodwill" to ease world tension, although he conceded that the world is in an "awful muddle." He cautioned against letting "foolish speech" inflame Anglo-American relations, an apparent reference to criticism in some British quarters of State Secretary Dulles of the United States, and in the U.S. Congress of Churchill's prodding for immediate big-power talks with Russia.

Strike Brings U.S. Atomic Plant to Halt

OAK RIDGE, Tenn. (AP)—All work at a multi-million-dollar atomic-plant construction project was at a standstill here today, halted by a strike of 550 AFL sheet-metal workers.

About 6,000 other AFL workmen refused to cross picket lines thrown up Monday by the sheet-metal workers, who struck Nov. 2 demanding 7-cents-a-mile travel pay to and from work.

The strikers' homes are scattered over a wide area and the spokesman estimated their demands for 7-cents-a-mile travel pay would average about $3.90 a worker daily.

SOBBING MOSSADEGH HITS LAWYER

Screaming Iran Leader Repeats Wild Display at Court-Martial

TEHRAN (AP)—Screaming, sobbing former Premier Mohammad Mossadegh today attempted to walk out of a court-martial trying him for his life after a wild fist-swinging scene climaxed his attempts to disavow his court-appointed lawyer.

The 73-year-old politician, accused of defying the Shah, trying to overthrow the monarchy and illegally dissolving parliament, shouted at his judges: "Give an order to cut off my head, but I must defend myself."

It was the third straight day of emotional fireworks staged by Mossadegh, virtual dictator of Iran before his overthrow last August by Royalist supporters. He told the tribunal Monday he would commit suicide if released and would not appeal if convicted.

He also threatened to boycott future court sessions, asserting that the court is not competent to try him.

Today's outburst came suddenly after an all-out effort by the aged nationalist leader to get rid of Col. Jalil Bozorgmehr, his court-appointed lawyer.

Bawling "Go away, damn you," Mossadegh rose from the bench and swung at Bozorgmehr, hitting him on the arm. Brushing the lawyer aside, Mossadegh staggered past three dumbfounded court officials and stumbled 20 feet down the aisle before officers caught up with him.

Throughout the melee, Bozorgmehr stood stiffly at attention, but with his head bowed.

After Mossadegh was halted by the officers, he sobbed hysterically, buried his head on his folded arms and screamed: "Say whatever you like. God forgive your dead father."

Bozorgmehr, still standing and his head now erect, told the court: "These two days I have been so insulted by this man and put in such a position I do not know what to do or say. When I was appointed to this job I agreed because I felt my responsibility. But during the last two days he has threatened, tried to besmirch my person, my honor. Under these circumstances the court should not expect me to say anything."

Then he launched into his defense of Mossadegh with a sharp attack on the court's competence to try the politician.

He argued Mossadegh should be tried by Iran's Supreme Court, a civilian body, instead of army judges.

He added: "Even before that, the Majlis should rule whether Mossadegh still is Iran's prime minister. Political charges must be tried before a civilian jury."

If th' big three do fin'ly git t'gether, we kin thank th' big one, eh, Sir Winston?

But there ain't a TV producer in th' country who don't water at th' mouth when he thinks o' Mossadegh's talent, all goin' t' waste.

Beginnin' t' wonder whether th' provincial finances are run on double entry or double talk.

VANCOUVER (CP)—Charles Matthews' last request came Sunday, when he asked to be allowed to listen to a radio. It was placed in the death-rattle corridor, outside the gate to his cell.

He had attempted suicide four times since his arrest and was under constant surveillance. A request was relayed for him to a radio station and, guards said, he cried while a popular singer sang.

The hanging took three minutes and 30 seconds. One of the last sounds the tall athlete heard was a shouted goodbye from fellow-prisoners when he started the short walk to the gallows in a converted elevator shaft.

The prison was silent as Rev. Albert Risby of the Standard American Church prayed with the condemned man kneeling in front of the rope.

At the same time, a 23-year-old woman who lived with the Smiths, Mrs. Jocelyn Wallberg, was severely beaten while Matthews played the record "Charlie Was a Boxer" on the phonograph.

Twelve minutes after the trap was sprung, the New York Negro was pronounced dead. His body was taken to a pauper's grave. There were no mourners. His body was not claimed.

ORDERED BEFORE COMMITTEE

Truman, Byrnes Get Subpoenas

NEW YORK (AP)—A subpoena was served upon former President Truman today calling upon him to appear before the House Un-American Activities Committee Thursday.

WASHINGTON (AP)—A member of the House Un-American Activities Committee said today it has issued a subpoena for the appearance of former president Truman Thursday for questioning in the Harry Dexter White case.

The committee member, a Democrat who did not wish to be identified, said he did not know whether the subpoena had yet been served on Truman who is in New York.

He said a subpoena for the same day also has been issued for former state secretary James F. Byrnes.

Byrnes, now governor of South Carolina, has supported the charge of Attorney-General Herbert Brownell that Truman promoted White, one-time assistant treasury secretary, although the president was aware of FBI reports that White was a Soviet spy.

Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan, Truman's former military aide, already is under subpoena for Thursday, both by the un-American activities committee and the Senate internal security subcommittee.

The Senate group announced this morning that it intends to ask Byrnes "for his recollections" of the matter.

Byrnes said in a statement Monday night that he recalled the Federal Bureau of Investigation document and talked with Truman about it early in 1946—the time when White was being promoted.

QUESTION SECRETARY
The Senate committee said that in addition to Vaughan it would question Vaughan's former secretary, Miss Ruth Anderson, on Thursday.

Truman has no immunity to subpoena from a congressional committee by reason of the fact he is an ex-president. However, it could be a fine legal point whether some questions about his official actions would infringe upon constitutional division of the executive and legislative branches of the government.

Byrnes and Truman have become bitter political foes in recent years, and the South Carolina governor supported President Eisenhower in the 1952 campaign.

Tri-Country Talks
BELGRADE (Reuters)—Talks aimed at securing peace in the Balkans began here today between the Greek, Turkish and Yugoslav general staffs.

Transportation companies expect no great increase in travel on the mid-week holiday.

Places of entertainment, however, will be open. Motion picture houses will observe their regular hours and Totem Theatre will stage its evening performance. Beer parlors and restaurants will be open.

The weather will not be particularly good for veterans and other groups taking part in cenotaph services. Weatherman William Mackie predicted cloudy skies and a few showers overnight and Wednesday, with winds of 15 miles. Temperatures, though, will be in the mild range between 48 and 55 degrees.

Remembrance Day holiday will be observed by staff members of the Victoria Times and no editions of the paper will be published tomorrow.

Next regular editions of The Times will appear on Thursday.

Hockey Death Unavoidable Says Witness

BARRIE, Ont. (BUP)—A hockey official testified today that Defenseman Walter Fines of the Aurora Bears could not have avoided the accident that killed his opponent.

The official, Jack Drury, timekeeper of the game in which Robert Gillies, 18, a forward with the Collingwood Greenhorns, was fatally injured March 4, 1952.

Drury testified that Fines came in fast chasing the puck and that Gillies was unbalanced. Gillies would have been hurt if no one had touched him.

Drury said, "he had gone in crouched too low. He added that four players hit the board at the same time, and Gillies went down while Fines was still standing holding the screen with his left hand.

Fines appeared for the first time Monday before the Supreme Court charged with manslaughter.

He is George Herbert Coward, 50, of 929 North Park.

He was apprehended by two Saanich police officers at 3 a.m. Monday while driving a car along Quadra near Tattersall.

In the rear compartment of the car they found a large amount of sweepstake material and more after raiding his North Park Street home.

Coward originally appeared before Magistrate H. C. Hall in Saanich police court Monday morning charged with the same offense.

WIL Baseball Clubs May Collect Gates From Home Games

Victoria's frequently financially embarrassed Tynes, one of the best home-crowd-drawing teams of the Western International Baseball League, may set its own admission prices and keep its own ball park proceeds next year.

This was the gist of a resolution adopted by WIL executives in session at the Empress Hotel today.

Last season clubs operated on a 60-40 split of receipts, the lesser sum for the visiting team. The home proceeds rule would apply to all member teams.

However, there's still a catch in it. Bruce Williams of Salem reserved the right to reopen the matter at the league's January meeting. There the resolution might be rescinded.

The executive reduced the player limit of all teams from 18 to 16, including playing managers.

Salem's Bruce Williams was elected first vice-president of the league today, following election of Robert Abel of Tacoma as president Monday. Jim McMonagle of Lewiston, Idaho, is second vice-president, and G. F. Abel, brother of Robert Abel, is secretary. He's also from Tacoma.

Allied Leaders Meet In Bermuda Dec. 4-8

LONDON (UP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill announced today he will meet with President Eisenhower and French Premier Joseph Laniel in Bermuda Dec. 4 to 8.

Churchill issued a statement at No. 10 Downing Street, his official residence.

The Big Three Allied leaders are to review the entire range of international issues in their conference, it was made known.

An authoritative source said Churchill also will make one more effort to convince Mr. Eisenhower that Soviet Premier Georgi M. Malenkov should be invited to a "last chance" Big Four meeting.

Churchill's announcement of his proposed meeting with President Eisenhower and Laniel said: "It has been decided to hold the three-power conference at Bermuda which was planned for the beginning of July but had to be put off (due to Churchill's illness)."

"President Eisenhower and Mr. (John Foster) Dulles will represent the United States, M. Laniel and (French Foreign Minister Georges) Bidault France and Sir Winston Churchill and (British Foreign Secretary Anthony) Eden Britain."

It is hoped to meet from Dec. 4 to Dec. 8 and various matters of common concern to the three powers will be discussed.

If Churchill fails to convince President Eisenhower at the Bermuda meeting that there ought to be a top-level Big Four conference, he will drop that project for the present, the authoritative informant said.

Churchill's recent speeches have shown less enthusiasm for such a Big Four talk.

The chief purpose of the Bermuda meeting, it was understood, will be to survey the position of the Western Allies now that Russia has refused to hold talks at the foreign ministers level to ease world tension, and apparently gone back to the "hard" policy of the late Joseph Stalin.

The invitation for the new Bermuda meeting was said to have come from Churchill about two weeks ago.

Russia's rejection of the west's invitation for a four power ministers' conference in Lugano speeded the decision for the three-power talks, London and Washington sources said.

Churchill wants to discuss personally with Eisenhower and Laniel what steps the west is to take in the immediate future to resolve the deadlock in east-west relations.

Long Cold War in Prospect

The prime minister will be 79 this month and has announced he is staying in office only
